INFRASTRUCTURE University Kuala Lumpur (IUKL) together with charity organisation Nadi Malaysia and Universiti Putra Malaysia (UPM) will stage a royal charity musical theatre production in December. A launching ceremony for this collaboration was recently held at IUKL's multi-purpose hall.

The collaboration aims to give the students an opportunity to showcase their skills in the performing arts as well as in music composition, costume design, and sound and light engineering. Besides students, the main cast will include well-known local actors, who will be announced later in the year by Tengku Sri Temenggong of Terengganu, Raja Datuk

Seri Tengku Baharuddin Sultan Mahmud, the honorary patron of Nadi Malaysia.

The venue for the opening night is being finalised and is planned to be held either in Istana Budaya or Malaysia Tourism Centre (MATIC).

After performances in Kuala Lumpur, the organisers intend to stage the production in Johor Bahru, Kuala Terengganu, and Penang next year. They also hope to stage the production in Arabic in Abu Dhabi, in conjunction with the Najah Education Expo in Sept next year. It aims to promote Malaysia as an education hub to students in the United Arab Emirates.
