DOGS' DAY OUT

Owners and pets take full advantage of Universiti Putra Malaysia's 16th annual Dogathon event

→ PAGES 6/7

poodle posing at a fun photo booth.

While some dogs were busy working out, some just wanted to enjoy a relaxing Saturday

Pooches have 'howl-o-ween' good time

CANINE CARNIVAL: Dogs and their owners had fun socialising and participating in contests at UPM's annual Dogathon

"We ask the owners about their medical histories and if the dogs are prone to heatstrokes, we remind the owners to keep them hydrated."

Nur Syuhada

Adnan.

Faculty of Veterinary

Medicine final year

FAREZZA HANUM RASHID

reets@nstp.com.my

T was a dogs' day out recently at Universiti Putra Malaysia (UPM)'s 16th annual Dogathon event.

German Shepherds, Beagles, Bulldogs, Miniature Schnauzers and Siberian Huskies were among the many breeds that came beautifully groomed for the Halloween-themed carnival called Howl-o-ween. Some were even in

The wet weather and muddy field did not others. dampen the spirits of the dogs and their masters. MIAI

UPM's Bukit Ekspo was decorated with cardboard coffins, pumpkins and other Halloween paraphernalia to create a ghastly but fun atmosphere.

Organised by UPM's Faculty of Veterinary Medicine student association (Veternak) and Zoologico Club, the objective of Dogathon was to raise funds for Pro-Kasih, a project aimed at controlling the population of strays in a humane way.

"We are expecting 1,000 dogs today. In 2010, we had 1,111 dogs and made it into the Malaysia Book of Records," said Dogathon 2012 director Joanna Ng Sze Yi, 21.

"With 300 students involved in the organising team, it fook us a year to prepare for this event and right after this we have to start planning for next year," said Ng's co-director, Lim Zhi Jian, 22.

In 16 years, Dogathon has managed to attract many sponsors and supporters among non-governmental organisations and private sectors.

They had booths around the field to promote animal right causes, introduce new pet products and provide information on pet medication. Among them were Petworld, Vet-star, Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA), Eukanuba, Paws and Pet Positive.

Pet Positive president Anthony Thanasayan said he was happy to support the event and had done so since it was initiated.

"We are pleased to be invited again and this year the event has become more disabled-friendly with special parking spaces and toilets.

"There are volunteers to push us in our wheelchairs to ensure that we do not miss any of the activities," he said.

Anthony added that animals, especially dogs, play an important role for the disabled and dismissed the general public's perception that dogs are aggressive.

On the question of what breed of dog is the best to care for the disabled, Anthony said that it depends on how the dog and master can care for each other.

"All dogs can be trained to jump on a bed and help a disabled person up depending on the size, disability and so on," he said.

A newcomer to the supporters' list was the Malaysian Independent Animal Rescue (MIAR).

MIAR ambassador, 2009/2010 Miss World Malaysia Thanuja Ananthan, said that Dogathon was a great event to bring the community together where both owners and dogs can socialise with others.

MIAR, as an animal rescue organisation, comes across countless cases of animal abuse and abandonment.

"What we can do is get together and try to do something about it, because one NGO cannot fight the battle alone," Thanuja said.

Many activities were in store for the dogs and their masters to participate together such as the "Race in the Valley of the Undead", an obstacle course; fastest eating contest; and hide-and-seek.

To participate in the Dogathon, each canine had to undergo a physical checkup conducted by the Faculty of Veterinary Medicine students.

"We make sure that their vaccinations are up to date and that the females are not in heat," said final year student Nur Syuhada Adnan, 24.

"We ask the owners about their medical histories and if the dogs are prone to heatstrokes, we remind the owners to keep them hydrated."

Stephen Jambu Nathan, 47, who owns three French bulldogs, was impressed with the event.

"It it good to see people interacting with each other and share dog-caring tips.

"I am surprised to see many Malays here playing with the dogs, and hopefully this will end the stigma dogs have among them," he said.

Stephen said there was a positive change in the trend of adopting dogs, as more pet owners are opting to adopt stray animals rather than buy from pet stores.

Jenny Chang, 30, and Shaun Lai, 32, both of whom were also at last year's Dogathon, came with their dogs, a Jack Russell Terrier and a Beagle.

"It is better this year, with more participants and booths where we can learn about the latest products for dog care," Chang said.

Lai said that events such as Dogathon are important for the wellbeing of dogs as they need to socialise, just like people.

"It is better this year with more participants and booths where we can learn about the latest products for dog care,

Siherian Huskies attract attention at the Dogathon Div by Syarafia Abd S