World Wide Web audio: ensuring adequate hardware and software configurations

ABSTRACT

As Client machines need to be properly configured with the correct hardware and software to playback the many different audio file formats available, a discussion of how to configure client machines is given.