NEW POLICIES

PENANG FOLK WASTE 700,000kg OF FOOD DAILY

Customers do not finish food, contributing to the waste

NEWS / Story of the day

BALVIN KAUR GEORGE TOWN balvinkaur@nst.com.my

OR more than half a censuch as char koey teow and nasi kandar, that are easily available, people are spoilt for choice. Unfortunately, they are also unap-

This is evident from the high in the state daily, estimated by tels and catering businesses. the state government to be at an average of 700,000kg.

is the weight of four empty 747 State Welfare, Caring Society This is largely attributed to the waste going to the Pulau Burung This is backed by National Solid tury, Penang relished its Waste Management Department reputation as a food statistics, where the largest contributor of solid waste is food With a wide variety of foods, waste, averaging up to 3,000

Most food wastage is believed bles and fruits. volume of food wastage recorded to come from food eateries, ho-

Wedding and open house caterers have also been identified to be atively lower. In figurative terms, 700,000kg among the biggest contributors of food waste, followed by restaupassenger aircraft or 700 Proton rants, such as nasi kandar and ready-to-serve food outlets.

and Environment Committee fact that customers or clients of chairman Phee Boon Poh said this wedding caterers, nasi kandar or thing we can do is to cook fewer

"This does not take into account batches of popular unfinished food on items as they are our customers' finishing. plates. On average.

for extra portions, but that does not deter customers from wast-wasted by being left uneaten.

Frandy Beach Bar co-owner K.

amount made up 40 per cent of ready-to-serve food outlets exthe average 1,750 tonnes of solid pect big portions per plate.

However, most patrons do not finish consuming the food on the plate, with many leaving a quarter of the food uneaten. These establishments and businesses cook big amounts of food daily, some of which are thrown away at the end of the day. This has led to groups calling for Other contributors of food dump unsold raw meat, vegeta-

food wastage, the volume is rel-

"In the nasi kandar business, we have to cook many dishes daily to tomers had added to the amount leftovers and hand them to dog cater to our customers' taste. We of food thrown from the outlet. cannot avoid cooking some dishes as there may be cuswe can do is to cook fewer unpopular items and make fresh batches of popular items as they are finishing." Sahubar estimated the food waste at his outlet to be be-customers leave a SAHUBAR ALI quarter of food on Owner of Nasi Kandar their plates, espe- Line Clear restaurant ment portion control and charge are held at the restaurant."

Sahubar said more food was Thamo said food waste from his a new batch. restaurant kitchen was minimal.

new policies and stringent mea- waste are shopping malls and vegsures to be put in place to prevent etable sellers, who are forced to

> While other businesses, such as hotels and bakeries, suffer from Sahubar Ali, 59, the owner of the popular Nasi Kandar Line Clear restaurant in Jalan Penang here, said his eatery also suffered from food wastage.

"The only thing

tween 5kg and 10kg unpopular items and make fresh

A food stall owner in Kampung Melayu, Nurul Aisyah Jalani, 48, said she cooked dishes that were the meals.

Food wastage amounts to 40 per cent of the 1,750 tonnes of solid waste going to the Pulau

Burung landfill daily. PIX BY base, who are used

most order a lot of

to bigger portions.

popular at a set portion. "I serve a lunch crowd. So, if any dish finishes by then, I do not make handed them over to organic shelters."

"When customers do not finish But, he said, food waste by custheir food, my staff will collect the etables as composting takes time.

"Our prices are A hotelier here, who spoke on reasonable and our condition of anonymity, said hotels also faced food wastage from portions are bigger to cater to an international customer "Similar to nasi kandar outlets, we have no choice but to put out a full spread of dishes for break-"We have told our fast, lunch, teatime and dinner. patrons that our "We will make a small amount of portions are big, but everything and observe the popularity of certain dishes to tailor appetisers, main the amount of food made." He said following the hotel's dishes and desserts, standard operating procedure leaving most unfinmost of the uneaten food would Thamo said since most dishes at his "However, we do segregate food restaurant were waste from other solid waste for made to order, there composting."

was nothing he Batu Lanchang wet market vegcould do to salvage etable seller T. Murugan, 38, said he and other sellers also suffered "If there are leftfrom food wastage as they often overs, we donate the threw away rotten vegetables. food to homes and

"Sometimes, some vegetables dog shelters, espe- are rotting or overripe by the time cially when buffets we receive them. Customers will not buy these vegetables.

"Other times, customers squeeze or press them. As such, we will have to throw them away." Murugan said instead of throwing away rotten vegetables, they farms to be used as compost.

"Not all farms take rotten veg

NEW policies and stringent mea- wastage was a matter of attitude sures must be carried out to pre- and culture. vent food wastage in Penang following a two-fold increase in food waste in recent years.

Food Policy Studies director Professor Dr Fatimah Mohamed Arshad said this was critical in the battle against food waste. She said food waste was a serious problem, with statistics showing that nearly 40 per cent of solid waste was food

"This figure, while not as high as in other Fatimah Mohamed countries, like the Arshad United States, is nevertheless alarming. There is a restaurants, catering businesses need for action by the federal and state governments to tackle the problem before it gets worse."

must step up its food wastage awareness campaigns, as food establishments that fail to adhere

"They have to start their food to be set for hotels, and grocery stores. "This needs to be studied intensively and implemented, with Fatimah said the government officers enforcing the guidelines.

"There should be a penalty for to the policies and guidelines."

cleanliness into them.

lines on how to manage food wastage need

"Policies and guide-

She said the policies and guidelines could include portion control, price hikes and such.

Chicago, the United States, which packed customers' unfinished food so they ments and consumers might balk at these policies, guidelines and penalties. Fatimah said they would accept them eventually "When Singapore implemented the 'no chewing gum rule', there were many who rebelled. Eventually people got on board when they realised that the government was serious about

While the results of the efforts might not large scale, Fatimah said it would affect at least 50 per cent of

State govt serious about food waste composting scheme

THE Penang government is inten- Jalan Macalister." sifying its food composting initiatives and food awareness cam- waste composting, the state gov-

State Welfare, Caring Society waste segregation policy. and Environment Committee chairman Phee Boon Poh said the state govwastage awareness campaigns ernment had installed and programmes from the nurs- bio-regen food wastethat instilling certain locations to convert such waste into bioliquid soil enhancers.

We are running a food composting pilot programme involving where children in kinfood stalls at Chowdergartens are rerasta Market, where food waste from the Phee Boon Poh. quired to clean their classrooms to instil market is sent for civic awareness on erators at Chowrasta Market and of the problem.

Phee said to encourage food paigns to reduce food wastage. ernment. had implemented a

"There are many places that do not implement the policy, but we will look into ways to encourage waste separation including imposing legal sanctions on offenders." He said there were more than 20 food wastage awareness campaigns carried out by the state government last year.

"We had awareness programmes, games, competitions, exhibitions, talks We collected 3,000kg of waste and discussions last year, which in 15 days from 28 business op- have improved public awareness

Sight of unfinished food gives NGO chief something to chew on

THE sight of an unfinished plate problems like clogged drains, of food irks S.M. Mohamed Idris.

Idris, president of the Consumers Association of Penang, ple of a restaurant in said many people did not see that as a problem or understand the effect it brought.

His concern was not baseless as the amount of food going to waste continues to While establish- rise, indicating the public's lack of aware-Four years ago, the association ran a survey and found about 350,000kg of food were wasted in the state daily The figure has dou- S.M. Mohamed bled to an estimated Idris 700,000kg daily.

He said the increase in num-taken was to tax outlets with high bers showed that people were un-volume of food waste. concerned about food wastage.

"People do not care, and most of the campaigns about food vastage has made no effect."

He said action must be taken as gases and contributed to pest order food within a limit." problems.

"Pests, such as rats, are everywhere because of food waste."

adding that the state government needed to take measures to prevent food wastage.

"There is a need for a stringent, rather than a carrot-and-stick approach, to reduce food wastage.

"Regulations should be introduced, particularly in the food and beverage industry."

He said in Japan the food and beverage industry was regulat ed under the Food Recycling Law.

"Although the law focuses on food waste, rather than food wastage, it helps reduce wastage.' He said another move that could be

He said awareness of the dangers of food waste should be instilled into children from a young "Parents should teach their food waste emitted greenhouse children to finish their food, and

> He said eateries should serve smaller portions to customers.

"The customer can order more Idris said food waste also led to if they want."

A restaurant worker holding a plate of prawns at the Nasi Kandar Line Clear restaurant in Jalan Penang.

