

Determinants of community participation in community policing program in Malaysia

ABSTRACT

Understanding the factors that influence community participation in neighbourhood is vital in developing a successful community policing program in Malaysia. The aim of this study is to highlight the factors that influence participation of community using the socio-ecological model. Five factors were identified and they are individual, community, organizational and governmental factors. The findings helped in developing a conceptual model that could serve as an useful resource for future study.

Keyword: Community participation; Community policing; Socio-ecological model