Faculty: Educational Studies

The study is concerned with Malik Bennabi's ideas on civilization and the development of society in the Muslim world, with the focus on education. The purpose is to reveal the nature of his ideas and views on education in order to conceptualize them in the form of an integrated approach to the educational problem in the Muslim world.

Due to the nature of the research problem, qualitative methodology was employed in this study. This study involved an investigation into Malik Bennabi's thoughts from three sources of evidence; Malik Bennabi's works, the different studies carried out on his thoughts and interviews. The content analysis and interviews were employed to examine the data in addressing the research questions. Content analysis; as a technique, dealt with documentary evidence. The interviews provided additional information gathered from personalities acquainted with Malik Bennabi's thoughts.

The findings of this study show that Malik Bennabi made a considerable contribution to the enrichment of the Islamic educational thought by suggesting a range of rich and enduring ideas that may contribute to the solution of the Muslim dilemma. Four parameters are crucial to grasp the nature of Malik Bennabi's approach to the educational problem in the Muslim world; religion as a cosmic phenomenon, Islam as the principal frame of reference, the Islamic problem as civilizational in nature and the human factor as the major factor of the Muslim world's civilizational problems.

The methodological approach to study the problems of civilization adopted by Malik Bennabi had an explicit impact on defining the concept of education. Man, the Muslim, is the central factor in the study of the problems of civilization in the Muslim world. Education is the process of civilizing the human being and imparting to his existence a historical significance in order to enable him to resume his historical mission. Many concepts have been treated in Malik Bennabi's works. However, due to their educational nature, the concepts form together the essential elements upon which the process of education is established. Malik Bennabi treated four philosophical foundations of education; the nature of man, society, knowledge and the aims of education. Malik Bennabi provided Islamic education with a new approach to conceptualize the educational problem and education as a project to promote a new culture and build up a civilization. This approach considers the Islamic problem as civilizational in nature but an educational matter. Malik Bennabi did not present his ideas and views on education in a systematic manner. However, these ideas may form together an integrated approach to conceptualize the educational problem in the Muslim world as a problem of civilization. So, it is recommended that future studies should attempt to formulate this approach integrally based on the findings of this study.

Kajian ini adalah mengenai pendekatan Malik Bennabi dalam menghadapi permasalahan pendidikan di kalangan dunia Muslim. Tujuan kajian ini adalah untuk menyingkap ketulinan idea dan pandangan Malik Bennabi terhadap pendidikan bagi mewujudkan konsep pendekatan bersepadu untuk menangani permasalahan pendidikan dalam dunia Muslim.

Sehubungan dengan tuntutan persoalan kajian, metod kualitatif telah digunakan. Kajian ini melibatkan penyelidikan tentang pemikiran Malik Bennabi yang daripada tiga sumber: hasil kerja Malik Bennabi, perbandingan kajian-kajian yang dibuat ke atas pemikiran Malik Bennabi dan temubual. Temubual yang dilakukan memberikan maklumat tambahan terutamanya daripada individu-individu yang berdampingan dan menghayati pemikiran Malik Bennabi.

Penemuan kajian ini menunjukkan Malik Bennabi telah memberi sumbangan yang ketara dalam memperkayakan pemikiran pendidikan yang bercirikan Islam dengan mencadangkan kepelbagaian idea yang bernas lagi mencabar dalam meleraikan dilema masyarakat Islam. Empat parameter yang penting digunakan bagi memahami bentuk pendekatan Malik Bennabi terhadap permasalahan pendidikan dunia Muslim: agama sebagai fenomena kosmik, Islam sebagai prinsip asas rujukan, permasalahan pendidikan sebagai permasalahan tamadun dan faktor manusia sebagai faktor utama di dalam permasalahan tamadun dalam dunia Islam.

Metod pendekatan yang diamati oleh Malik Bennabi bagi mengkaji permasalahan tamadun mempunyai impak yang eksplisit bagi mendefinisikan konsep pendidikan. Pendidikan adalah proses mentamadunkan manusia dan memperjelaskan kewujudannya dalam signifikan sejarah yang membolehkan manusia untuk mencapai misi pensejarahannya. Banyak konsep telah diteliti di dalam pemikiran Malik Bennabi. Walau bagaimanapun, selaras dengan tuntutan konsep pendidikan, konsep-konsep tersebut boleh dijalinakan bagi membentuk elemen-elemen penting yang menjadi asas kepada kewujudan konsep pendidikan itu sendiri. Malik Bennabi telah menghuraikan empat landasan falsafah pendidikan iaitu, natur manusia, natur masyarakat, natur ilmu dan matlamat pendidikan. Malik Bennabi telah menyumbang kepada pendidikan Islamik dengan pendekatan baru untuk memahami permasalahan pendidikan dan pendidikan sebagai projek bagi mempromosikan budaya baru dan meningkatkan tamadun. Malik Bennabi tidak mempersembahkan idea-idea dan pandangan-pandangan terhadap pendidikan secara khusus dan sistematis. Walau bagaimanapun, idea-ideanya merupakan asas untuk membentuk pendekatan bersepadu bagi mengkonsepsikan permasalahan pendidikan dunia Muslim sebagai permasalahan tamadun. Oleh itu, adalah dicadangkan agar kajian akan datang memberi tumpuan menghasilkan pendekatan yang bersepadu berlandaskan penemuan-penemuan yang dihasilkan di dalam kajian ini.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

There is a general agreement among Muslim scholars, thinkers and political leaders that the Muslim world is passing through an extremely difficult stage, namely the inability to extract itself from the present state of bewilderment. However, all those who are interested in this dilemma have called for a prompt change as an inevitable necessity (Abu Suleiman, 1981).

While change is a social phenomenon, a deep reflection on its nature, dimensions and aims will lead to the realization that education is its essence and vital component. So, any change in society depends on the type of required change needed through education. From this perspective, educational problems emerge as one of the important concerns of any attempt towards social change. “The planning and achievement of the educational project of the future may begin by analyzing society and categorizing its problems” (Morrish, 1972, p. 31; 1993, p. 78). So, “the principal contribution of the sociological approach to education is to draw attention to the importance of the social context” (Aboud, 1998, p. 49). Some researchers and thinkers have adopted the abovementioned sociological perspective. One of them is Malik Bennabi who approached the problems of education from a sociological dimension within the context of the civilizational crisis in the Muslim world¹.

Many attempts have been made throughout the history of the Muslim world to achieve the needed reform. Those attempts include the reform movements of al Afghani and Abduh as well as es-Sennoussi (1786-1860) in Libya, al-Mahdi in Sudan, ibnu Abdelwahab in Saudi Arabia, Hassan al-Banna (-1949) in Egypt, ibnu Badis (1889-1939) in Algeria and al-Mawdudi (-1978) in Pakistan (Abbassi, 1989). The educational dimension of the problem has actually caught the attention of most, if not all, the reformists. Indeed, they have mentioned the importance of education in resolving the problems of the Muslim world. However, due to their lack of awareness of the importance and necessity of methodological thinking, their attempts lacked comprehensiveness and a conceptualization of the educational problem and its dimensions. They were not founded upon a theory with a determined set of aims and objectives and the means as well as the accurate planning of the different stages of achievement. They were not interested in developing a methodological approach to achieve the needed reform through for example, creative thinking, but were more inclined to re-produce the past experience through taqlid (imitation). Hence, if we are to analyze the efforts of the reformist, it is realized that those efforts were motivated by devotion rather than by methodological thinking (RT: 78) and, according to Malik Bennabi, this has contributed little to help the Muslim conscience regain its awareness². This fact can be witnessed in different parts of the Muslim world where a growing resurgence amongst Muslims is still in its formative stage. However, the different attempts of revivalism in the Muslim world should enable the Muslim to move from the state of backwardness to that of the civilized man. Such a move can be achieved through the qualification of the Muslim man to fulfill his mission in history as recommended by the teachings of al-Qur'ān and the authentic Sunnah as an essential element of the educational process of civilizing the Muslim man.

Malik Bennabi's methodological approach is directed toward the problem of change in the contemporary Muslim world. Such a methodological approach has influenced most of the subsequent research into such problems³ as well as many contemporary Islamic movements of revivalism⁴. This influence is due to the comprehensiveness of Malik Bennabi's methodological approach and the authenticity of his ideas and views on the different issues that he approached such as the relationship between civilization and the process of education.

The study examines the need for a new perspective on education required by the contemporary Muslim world through the thoughts of Malik Bennabi. Such a perspective treats education as being beyond the process of building the human personality. Rather, this perspective sees education as a project with the civilizational dimension as its main concern. The aim of such a project is to qualify the Muslim man to achieve his historical mission, which is different from any partial or coincidental attempts to deal with the historical existence of the Muslim world.
