Wish List for the Education Minister

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17, 2020

With the change of the government administration in Malaysia, many parents are hopeful that the new Education Minister, Dr Maszlee Malik, will bring about positive changes in the education system. Here are some suggestions from experts on how the new minister can improve the educational landscape in Malaysia.

1. Revamp the curriculum
   - The national curriculum needs to be updated to reflect the current needs of the society.
   - The curriculum should be more relevant to the real world and promote critical thinking and problem-solving skills.

2. Increase funding for education
   - The government should increase the budget for education to improve the quality of education.
   - This will include funding for teachers' training, infrastructure, and educational materials.

3. Improve teacher training
   - The government should invest in teacher training programs to improve the quality of teachers.
   - Teachers should be provided with opportunities for professional development.

4. Promote equal access to education
   - The government should work towards ensuring equal access to education for all students, regardless of their background.
   - This includes providing resources to remote and underserved areas.

5. Improve educational facilities
   - The government should invest in improving educational facilities, such as schools and libraries.
   - This will include providing adequate resources and infrastructure to support learning.

6. Promote inclusivity and diversity
   - The government should promote inclusivity and diversity in the education system.
   - This includes providing support for students with special needs and promoting cultural understanding.

7. Encourage innovation in education
   - The government should encourage innovation in education, such as the use of technology.
   - This will include providing resources and support for educators to explore new teaching methods.

8. Foster a love for learning
   - The government should work towards fostering a love for learning in students.
   - This includes promoting extracurricular activities and encouraging students to pursue their interests.

9. Improve teacher welfare
   - The government should ensure that teachers are well taken care of.
   - This includes providing decent working conditions and salaries.

10. Encourage community involvement
    - The government should encourage community involvement in the education system.
    - This includes involving parents and the community in decision-making processes.

By implementing these suggestions, the Education Minister can bring about positive changes in the education system in Malaysia. It is crucial to support the education system as it is the foundation of any nation's development.
