

UNIVERSITI PUTRA MALAYSIA

SUBJECTIVITIES GAINED AND LOST IN MELANCHOLIC FEMALE
EUNUCHS IN ALICE WALKER'S SELECTED NOVELS

KAMELIA TALEBIAN SEDEHI

FBMK 2016 31

SUBJECTIVITIES GAINED AND LOST IN MELANCHOLIC FEMALE
EUNUCHS IN ALICE WALKER'S SELECTED NOVELS

By

KAMELIA TALEBIAN SEDEHI

Thesis Submitted to the School of Graduate Studies, Univesiti Putra Malaysia in Fulfillment of the Requirements for the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy

February 2016

COPYRIGHT

All material contained within the thesis, including without limitation text, logos, icons, photographs, and all other artwork, is copyright material of Universiti Putra Malaysia unless otherwise stated. Use may be made of any material contained within the thesis for non-commercial purposes from the copyright holder. Commercial use of material may only be made with the express, prior, written permission of Universiti Putra Malaysia.

Copyright© Universiti Putra Malaysia

DEDICATION

TO THE PILLARS OF MY STRENGTH, TO MY UNDERSTANDING MOTHER AND SUPPORTIVE FATHER

Abstract of thesis presented to the Senate of Universiti Putra Malaysia in the fulfillment of the requirement for the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy

SUBJECTIVITIES GAINED AND LOST IN MELANCHOLIC FEMALE
EUNUCHS IN ALICE WALKER'S SELECTED NOVELS

By

KAMELIA TALEBIAN SEDEHI

February 2016

Chairman : Associate Professor Rosli Bin Talif, PhD
Faculty : Modern Languages and Communications

According to Julia Kristeva, melancholic subject suffers from the sense of loss which results from the loss of mother. As a consequence of this loss, the melancholic subject is a stranger to language, isolates herself, and does not have any interest in actions or even life itself. However, in my study, I contend that the loss of mother is not the only reason for melancholia in the female characters, Celie, Tashi, Mem, and Magdalena in the Alice Walker novels The Color Purple, Possessing the Secret of Joy, The Third Life of Grange Copeland, and By the Light of My Father's Smile, which were selected for this study. These female characters not only lost their mother or mother figures but also their sexuality has been oppressed, and they have been harassed; therefore, they are led to melancholia. These female characters do not have any knowledge about their bodies; therefore, they easily accept whatever old rituals and men impose on them. This condition of women lacking knowledge and the misrepresentation of female sexuality has been referred to by Germaine Greer as that of being a female eunuch. The purpose of my study was to focus on the reasons behind Celie, Tashi, Mem and Magdalena's melancholia, and the ways they attempt to heal it; either successfully or not. Therefore, I merge the concepts of Kristeva's melancholic subject and Greer's female eunuch to provide a new reading of melancholia for the selected female characters. Moreover, my thesis also explores Walker's selected novels in light of Kristeva's speaking subject to indicate how the use of language by the main selected female characters and other characters can make and unmake their subjectivity. Through the use of the language two of the female characters gained their subjectivity while the two others lost their subjectivity as the language is not powerful enough to indicate their needs and desires.

Abstrak tesis yang dikemukakan kepada Senat Universiti Putra Malaysia sebagai memenuhi keperluan untuk Ijazah Doktor Falsafah

SUBJEKTIVITI DIPEROLEH DAN HILANG DALAM EUNUK WANITA MELANKOLIK DALAM NOVEL TERPILIH ALICE WALKER

Oleh

KAMELIA TALEBIAN SEDEHI

Februari 2016

Pengerusi : Professor Madya Rosli Bin Talif, PhD
Fakulti : Bahasa Moden dan Komunikasi

Pada pendapat Julia Kristeva, subjek melankolik mengalami deria kehilangan yang disebabkan kehilangan ibu. Akibat kehilangan tersebut, subjek melankolik merupakan orang asing pada bahasa, mengasingkan dirinya, dan tidak mempunyai minat dalam aksi atau dalam kehidupannya sendiri. Walau bagaimanapun, dalam kajian ini, kehilangan ibu bukan hanya merupakan alasan untuk bersifat melankolia dalam karakter wanita, Celie, Tashi, Mem, dan Magdalena dalam novel-novel Alice Walker, seperti The Color Purple, Possessing The Secret of Joy, The Third Life of Grange Copeland, dan By The Light of My Father's Smile, yang telah dipilih dalam kajian ini. Karakter wanita ini tidak hanya kehilangan ibu mereka atau tokoh ibu, tetapi juga seksualiti mereka ditindas, dan mereka telah diganggu; oleh sebab itu, perkara tersebut menyebabkan melankolia. Karakter ini tidak mempunyai pengetahuan mengenai tubuh mereka; oleh sebab itu, mereka lebih mudah menerima apa juga yang dikenakan ke atas mereka oleh ritual usang dan lelaki. Keadaan wanita ini yang tidak berpengetahuan dan misrepresentasi seksualiti wanita telah dirujukkan oleh Germaine Greer sebagai eunuk wanita. Tujuan kajian ini adalah untuk memfokuskan alasan yang dihadapi melankolia Celie, Tashi, Mem dan Magdaleni, dan cara mereka cuba untuk mengubatnya; sama ada berjaya atau tidak. Oleh sebab itu, kajian ini meneliti pengertian subjek melankolik Kristeva dan eunuk wanita Greer bagi menyediakan pembacaan yang baharu mengenai melankolia bagi karakter wanita terpilih. Di samping itu, tesis ini meneliti novel terpilih Walker dari segi subjek lakonan Kristeva bagi menentukan cara bahasa yang digunakan oleh karakter utama terpilih dan karakter lain supaya dapat ditentukan dan tidak dapat ditentukan subjektiviti mereka. Melalui penggunaan bahasa, dua karakter wanita memperoleh subjektiviti mereka manakala dua karakter lagi hilang subjektiviti mereka disebabkan bahasa yang tidak berkesan bagi memenuhi keperluan dan keinginan mereka.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Hello shining sun! Hello thunder storm! Hello rain! Hello forests! Hello birds!

Alhamdulillah, I spent splendid times in Malaysia. Alhamdulillah, God gave me the opportunity to appreciate a new environment, new people, and new cultures. Alhamdulillah, for me, being here in Malaysia.

This thesis would not have been done without His eyes on me and His invisible hands, which carried me when I needed to be held. In His Glory, I celebrate this moment!

In addition to my great Almighty, I want to thank the following people, without whom I would be lost in the middle of nowhere.

I want to thank my dearest supervisor Dr. Rosli Talif, who was my academic father, as well. I appreciated your presence whenever I needed it. Your insightful comments on my work enlightened my path to reach the goal of obtaining my PhD.

Also, I want to thank my dearest Dr. Wan Roselezam Wan Yahya, who was my academic mother and my trusted friend. Thanks for all the detailed comments on my work, and thanks for reminding me to smile and go on when I was down and lost hope. No words can express my entire love for you.

Moreover, I would like to thank my dearest Dr. Hardev Kaur, who welcomed me into her office warmly, listened to my ideas patiently, and arranged them for me. Thanks for all the love you have given me.

I want to thank all the professors and staff of UPM, especially those of the Faculty of Modern Languages and Communication for providing such a great academic atmosphere for us students to follow our goals and reach them.

I am also thankful to some of my great friends in Malaysia whose presence brightened my lonely, gloomy days. I want to thank Tay Lai Kit, my pillow and my pillar. You are my source of comfort and strength. If I have my smile back is all because you are there for me.

I would like to also thank my office mate. During my stay in Dr. Wan's office, which I considered as my first home, I met my sister, soon to be Dr. Fatin Syuhada. Thanks, Fatin, for all the opportunities you provided me and filling my hopeless moments with rays of hope. The Penang trip, MICOLLAC conference, and our times together as roommates are merry unforgettable moments for me. I want to thank my darling angel, soon to be Dr. Esther Hooi Chee Mei for supporting me whenever i needed help. Chan, Li Yuan, Zoey, Soleha, and Lily, your presence coloured my days with joy and happiness.

I would like to thank my relatives for their encouraging messages and skyping me once in a while. My lovely grandparents, aunts, uncles and causins, i love you to the max.

My special thanks go to my parents, to whom this thesis is dedicated, who are the pillars of my strength. Thanks for all the financial and emotional support. I know it was hard for you to be away from your only child, your only daughter. Thanks for always having faith in me and my abilities and providing such a magnificent opportunity for me to follow my dream to continue my further studies. I gained so much experience during these years, and I am indebted to you for it all. I owe my all and everything I have to you, and no word can express my gratitude to you, my beloved parents.

May Allah bless you all and shower you with health, wealth, happiness, and success.

This dissertation was submitted to the Senate of Universiti Putra Malaysia and has been accepted as fulfillment for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. The members of the Supervisory Committee were as follows:

Rosli Bin Talif, PhD

Associate Professor
Faculty of Modern Languages and Communications
Universiti Putra Malaysia
(Chairman)

Wan Roselezam Binti Wan Yahya, PhD

Associate Professor
Faculty of Modern Languages and Communications
Universiti Putra Malaysia
(Member)

Hardev Kaur, PhD

Senior Lecturer
Faculty of Modern Languages and Communications
Universiti Putra Malaysia
(Member)

BUJANG BIN KIM HUAT, PhD

Professor and Dean
School of Graduate Studies
Universiti Putra Malaysia

Date:

Declaration by Members of Supervisory Committee

This is to confirm that:

- the research conducted and the writing of this thesis was under our supervision;
- supervision responsibilities as stated in the Universiti Putra Malaysia (Graduate Studies) Rules 2003 (Revision 2012-2013) were adhered to.

Signature : _____
Name of
Chairman of Supervisory
Committee : Rosli Bin Talif, PhD

Signature : _____
Name of
Member of
Supervisory
Committee : Wan Roselezam Binti Wan Yahya, PhD

Signature : _____
Name of
Member of
Supervisory
Committee : Hardev Kaur, PhD

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
ABSTRACT	i
ABSTRAK	ii
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	iii
APPROVAL	v
DECLARATION	vii
 CHAPTER
 1 INTRODUCTION	 1
1.1 Background of The Study	1
1.2 Statement of the Problem	3
1.3 Objectives of the Study	4
1.4 Scope and Limitations of the Study	4
1.5 Significance of the Study	5
1.6 Methodology	6
1.7 Conceptual Framework	8
1.7.1 The Semiotic and the Symbolic	8
1.7.1.1 Semiotic Chora	8
1.7.1.2 Interrelation of the Semiotic and the Symbolic	10
1.7.2 Speaking Subject	11
1.7.2.1 Subject in Process	11
1.7.3 Melancholia	13
1.7.4 Female Eunuch	14
1.8 Justification of Text Selection	15
1.9 Definition of Terms	16
1.10 Structure of the Thesis	16
 2 LITERATURE REVIEW	 17
2.1 Introduction	17
2.2 Past Studies on Selected Concepts by Julia Kristeva and Germaine Greer	17
2.2.1 Melancholia	17
2.2.2 On Julia Kristeva's Concepts and Review of Her Works	20
2.2.3 On Germaine Greer's Concept and Review of Her Works	22
2.3 Alice Walker	24
2.3.1 Alice Walker's Biography	24
2.3.2 Past Studies on Alice Walker's Novels	25
2.4 Conclusion	33
 3 SUBJECTIVITY GAINED: THE COLOR PURPLE AND POSSESSING THE SECRET OF JOY	 34
3.1 Introduction	34
3.2 Melancholic Eunuch	35

3.2.1	Celie	36
3.2.2	Tashi	42
3.3	Speaking Subject and Subject in Process	46
3.3.1	Free Direct Discourse	46
3.3.1.1	The Colour Purple	46
3.3.1.2	Possessing the Secret of Joy	53
3.3.2	Minor Characters' Point of View	62
3.3.2.1	The Colour Purple	62
3.3.2.2	Possessing the Secret of Joy	67
3.4	Conclusion	69
4	SUBJECTIVITY LOST: THE THIRD LIFE OF GRANGE COPELAND AND BY THE LIGHT OF MY FATHER'S SMILE	70
4.1	Introduction	70
4.2	Melancholic Eunuch	71
4.2.1	Mem	71
4.2.2	Magdalena	75
4.3	Speaking Subject and Subject in Process	78
4.3.1	Free Direct Discourse	78
4.3.1.1	The Third Life of Grange Copeland	78
4.3.1.2	By the Light of My Father's Smile	82
4.3.2	Minor Characters' Point of View	86
4.3.2.1	The Third Life of Grange Copeland	86
4.3.2.2	By the Light of My Father's Smile	88
4.4	Conclusion	90
5	CONCLUSION	92
5.1	Findings	92
5.2	Recommendations for Further Studies	94
	REFERENCES	96
	APPENDICES	107
	BIODATA OF STUDENT	109
	LIST OF PUBLICATIONS	110

CHAPTER ONE

INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background of The Study

Language and identity have been a main topic of research in recent years. Different critics, such as Julia Kristeva (1984), Michel Foucault (1990), and Jacques Derrida (1998), have focused on language and its effect on identity formation, which is the main objective of psychoanalysis. However, in some cases, a person is not able to form her identity as a result of a feeling of loss within herself. Throughout life, the subject can face different losses, but what has been lost that needs such mourning and leads to the inability to form an identity? The reason behind this sense of loss is melancholia. Melancholia has been studied in a range of different disciplines, such as psychoanalysis, philosophy, and literature. But why did this topic fascinate so many great minds, and, moreover, why has such a vast body of text been devoted to it? From ancient times to the modern era, different philosophers, literary figures, and psychoanalysts have devoted their time to discussing melancholia and its causes. In the following pages, I apply Julia Kristeva's concept of the melancholic subject to the main female characters in selected novels by Alice Walker: The Third Life of Grange Copeland (1970), The Color Purple (1982), Possessing the Secret of Joy (1992), and By the Light of My Father's Smile (1998).

Melancholia, based on Kristeva, is non-communicable grief, which, sometimes leads melancholic subjects to lose interest in everything, even life. Every one of us faces different misfortunes that make life unliveable, sorrowful, and made it into a living death situation. According to Kristeva, the melancholic subject has lost her mother and mourns for her; therefore, she is silent and cannot have verbal communication as not only is she a stranger to language, but also she considers this sense of loss as a private feeling that cannot be perceived by others. As the melancholic subject is a stranger to the language, she may convey her intentions through "gestures, spasms or shouts" (Kristeva, Black Sun 15). Unlike many theses which have applied Kristeva's concept of the melancholic subject to different literary and non-literary works, I do not restrict myself to Kristeva's melancholic subject. Rather, I seek to merge Kristeva's concept of the melancholic subject with Germaine Greer's the female eunuch in order to analyse Walker's selected novels and provide another explanation for this state of mind, melancholia, based on my analysis. While Kristeva emphasises the loss of mother as the main reason behind the subject's melancholia, by including the notion of Greer's female eunuch in the analysis, I intend to demonstrate that many other reasons can complicate the situation.

Based on Greer, women have been oppressed by men throughout history. They have been victimised sexually, physically, and mentally. As women are not able to know their bodies or appreciate and fulfil their sexual needs, they feel loss of sexual experience in their lives. Thus, they have been turned into eunuchs, which is the meaning implied by Germaine Greer's statement, "women's sexual organs are shrouded in mystery" (The Female Eunuch 44). The only reason for them to be in society is to fulfill men's sexual needs, bear children, and do household chores. Women were not even allowed to have prominent jobs or social status for much of human history.

In my study, by merging the notions of Kristeva's melancholic subject and Greer's female eunuch, I intend to demonstrate the effects of the loss of mother and being sexually victimised on Walker's main female characters. However, I do not intend to blame themale characters as the only reasons behind these female characters' melancholia as women by following patriarchal traditions and supporting different ideologies that have also restricted women.

One can observe that, Alice Walker's female characters are in despair, but not discern what has caused them to be in such pain and agony. These women sigh, complain, grieve, and mourn; however, they cannot share the reasons of their grief. It is my hope that this work will clarify the causes behind Walker's female characters' melancholia in light of Kristeva's and Greer's concepts. Furthermore, my work will highlight the reasons behind the success or failure of these female characters' gaining unified psyches. Thus, I will offer close and detailed readings of individual texts, and, from each text, I have selected one female character to apply Kristeva's and Greer's concepts. As such, I have focused on four female characters, Celie, Tashi, Mem, and Magdalena as the subjects of this study. In addition, I have included discussion of Walker's biography and its reflection within her texts because, according to Kristeva, only a melancholic writer can write about melancholia, and, as far as Walker's biography is concerned, she was a melancholic subject.

From her childhood, Walker noticed how black people were suppressed and oppressed within white racist societies. Moreover, she perceived how black women have been twice-repressed within white racist society and black patriarchal families. She became depressed, and she attributed "most of this depression to the oppression that blacks face from the white— a reality that was unmistakably still present in the south" (Robinson 297). Later, she confessed that "the threat of self-destruction plagued me as it never had before" (Royster 353). When she was a child, and she played with her two brothers, she was blinded in one eye and she considered this event as the sexual blinding of women. Later on, this "blinding motivates Walker's personal sense of sisterhood with women who have undergone genital operations" (Lauret 215). As a result of so many plights she experienced in her life, she became a depressed person. One of these plights was her father's mistreatment of his children, especially his daughters and his wife.

After being treated by psychologists, Walker returned to normal life and participated in different campaigns. She discussed various issues in her books that others did not dare to even mention. She fought against circumcision practiced on women and questioned their identity as human beings. As Taien mentioned, Walker has been active in campaigning and writing about female circumcision in Africa (17). Female circumcision is the subject of Possessing the Secret of Joy, which I discuss in chapter three of the current study. Walker underwent bitter experiences and observed women's miserable situations, and she depicted them in her novels. In my analysis, the reader will notice how Walker depicts the negative influences of racism, female circumcision, restriction of free sexuality, and rape on black female characters, and the way all these matters, directly or indirectly, lead these women characters to melancholia. She chooses all this subject matter for her books as she intended to "heal some of the hurts of the past and to make it known to the world" (Robinson 309). As it is mentioned before, Walker participated in different campaigns and she has her own website. In alicewalkersgarden.com, Walker discusses different subject matters. Readers can comment and be closer to their favourite author. Besides, one should notice that Walker gained her fame when The Color Purple adopted into movies in 1985 and later on she improved her work by being a social figure rather than only an author.

In chapter two of my study, I discuss Walker's biography in more detail. In fact, I have chosen Alice Walker as, to the extent of my knowledge; other African Americans did not deal with the issues that Walker discussed. She passed the melancholic state of mind, which is a requirement for Kristeva when a writer talks about melancholia. Moreover, she discussed female circumcision, which is an issue for Greer as a feminist. According to Greer:

Male mutilation is considered trivial, female genital mutilation is considered devastating even if it involves nothing more than nicking the prepuce of the clitoris to provoke ritual bleeding. (The Whole Woman 103)

Besides, melancholia and the female eunuch, I have gone further and discussed Kristeva's other concept, the speaking subject. Based on Kristeva, the subject is not fixed, but she is malleable. By the use of language, interacting others, expressing herself, and being judged by others, the subject's subjectivity is made and unmade. When the subject uses language, her relation to herself and others is changed, and through this change, her subjectivity is shaped (Kristeva, Revolution 15). My intention is to show how female characters view themselves and how other characters look at them; therefore, their subjectivity made fluid.

In addition, as I intend to focus on main female characters in Walker's selected novels, I will use female pronouns whenever I explain the concepts in the current chapter of my study, which is a conceptual framework; as the subjects of my study are female characters.

1.2 Statement of the Problem

African American female authors devoted their works to black female characters and different losses they face in their lives. Among the African American authors, Maya Angelou (1928- 2014), Toni Morrison (1931) and Alice Walker (1944) are significant. However neither Angelou nor Morrison focused on female circumcision or other sexual taboo issues in their writing. Therefore, I chose Walker's novels as she covered those unspoken topics in her novels.

Alice Walker's female characters are melancholic subjects and they suffer from the sense of unsharable loss. Their sense of loss is not only related to the loss of their mother or mother figures, but is mostly related to their overlooked sexual desires. One can notice victimised women who are subjects of incest, circumcision, and overlooked sexual desires in Alice Walker's The Color Purple, The Third Life of Grange Copeland, Possessing the Secret of Joy, and By the Light of My Father's Smile. Women's sexual desires have been overlooked by their husbands, who think of gratifying their sexual desires and ignore women's sexual needs. Even one can notice father figures as victimisers, who ignore their daughters' sexual needs. As such, these sexually ignored and castrated melancholic female characters cannot express their feelings of loss of sexual passion with other people as they consider it private. The melancholic female eunuchs intend to express this loss within language, and they have the desire to share their feelings, but they cannot find appropriate ways of doing so.

In my study, I intend to argue that Kristeva's melancholic subject is applicable to Walker's novels as the main female characters feel the loss of mother, which Kristeva emphasised in her concept of the melancholic subject. However, I intend to amalgamate it with Greer's female eunuch to highlight the fact that the loss of mother is not the only reason behind the female characters' melancholia. Some previous studies have been devoted to application of psychoanalysis and different critics' concepts to Walker's selected novels, such as Jones, Pifer and Slausser, and Proudfit. However, they did not merge Kristeva's melancholic subject and Greer's female eunuch to emphasise women's shattered identity as a result of melancholia and the main reasons behind their melancholia. Furthermore, some other studies pinpointed the theme of sexuality in Walker's novels, which include research by Abbandonato and Cutter; however, they did not consider women as eunuchs, pointing out other aspects of the novels based on the theme of sexuality. As a result, I intend to merge Kristeva's melancholic subject and Greer's female eunuch to provide a new reading of Walker's selected novels. Moreover, by applying Kristeva's other concept of the speaking subject, I will argue that the subjectivity of her female characters is not fixed, but they have malleable subjectivity, depending on their use of language and other characters' use of language. By bringing in three different concepts, I examine the way Walker's female characters' subjectivity has been shattered and analyse the way they obtain their identities whether they are successful, or not.

As a result, this study highlights Alice Walker's melancholic female eunuchs in The Color Purple, Possessing the Secret of Joy, the Third Life of Grange Copeland, and By the Light of My Father's Smile in the light of Kristeva's melancholic subject, speaking subject, and Greer's female eunuch.

1.3 Objectives of the Study

As the focus of my study is application of selected concepts by Kristeva and Greer to Alice Walker's selected novels, the first objective of my study was to investigate the way the female characters, Celie, Tashi, Mem, and Magdalena, are led to melancholia. To obtain my objective, I focused on the female characters' sense of loss, especially their loss of mother and mother figures and lack of sexual desire within their life as caused by suppression or abuse. As follows, the second objective of my study aimed at examining how these melancholic female eunuchs, who are sexually maltreated, treat their melancholia. To obtain my second objective, I delved into the novels, focused on selected female characters, and indicated that either they were capable of getting rid of their melancholia by entering the realm of language, or not. The third objective of my study was to demonstrate the way the melancholic female eunuchs shape their subjectivity. To achieve my third objective, I will explore the way these melancholic female eunuchs use language and interact with others, which led to shaping and reshaping of their identities.

1.4 Scope and Limitations of the Study

In this study, I focus on Alice Walker's The Color Purple, Possessing the Secret of Joy, The Third Life of Grange Copeland, and By the Light of My Father's Smile in the light of Kristeva's melancholic subject and speaking subject and Greer's female eunuch. I will not discuss Walker's other novels and her other literary works as they are not within the focus of my study. Moreover, among all of Kristeva's concepts, I have selected the melancholic subject and the speaking subject. Therefore, I will merge Kristeva's melancholic subject and Greer's female eunuch for detailed textual analysis.

Melancholia has been defined by different critics throughout the history. In my study, I focus on Kristeva's melancholic subject which is caused by the loss of mother. Moreover, I merge Greer's female eunuch to demonstrate how denial of female's sexual needs can lead her to melancholia. Besides, among all the concepts by Kristeva, I have just chosen speaking subject to examine the way the characters use language in order to shape their subjectivity. The other concepts by Kristeva or Greer are not the concern of my study.

1.5 Significance of the Study

A primary aim of my study is to contribute toward merging the two concepts of Kristeva's melancholic subject and Greer's female eunuch to analyse Alice Walker's The Color Purple, Possessing the Secret of Joy, The Third Life of Grange Copeland, and By the Light of My Father's Smile. I intend to find a new definition of melancholia based on merging Kristeva's and Greer's concepts. Therefore, I intend to emphasise the way suppression of female sexual needs and its abuse lead to their melancholia, which has not been covered by Kristeva. My review of literature, thus far, has not led to the discovery of any prominent studies which combine the concepts of the melancholic subject and female eunuch together as a conceptual framework in order to explore how the selected novels of Walker negotiate within such a framework in relation to the female identity.

Based on my review of literature from different data bases, I found that previous studies have focused on different aspects of Alice Walker's novels. Some of them, focused on male characters rather than female characters, among them is, Gwendolyn Nicole Hale's "Tis Hard to Dance with One Shoe": The Failure of the Fathers in Walker's "The Color Purple" and McCourt's "Angela's Ashes" (2001) seeks to unravel the effects of tyrannical society on fathers' failures within their families. The main male characters of Walker's The Color Purple search for the means to overcome failures and oppression. This study is important as it highlights the way society influences men, which causes them to behave irrationally toward women as a result of social pressure and injustice.

Besides, there are some other studies which focused on psychoanalytic aspects of Walker's novels. For example, "Hysterical (r)Evolution: The Creation of Embodied Language in Alice Walker's "The Color Purple"", Tori Amos's "Little Earthquakes", and Frances Driscoll's "The Rape Poems" (2006) by Justine Elizabeth Maeve Gieni explores the effect of sexual violation, its psychological effects, and its healing process. The critic focused on the figure of the hysteric to delve into each literary text and explore the hysteric characters' struggles to reclaim or gain authority.

Unlike Gieni, whose focus is psychoanalysis, Johnson, Robert Stephen Mokaya Matunda in his doctoral thesis "A Linguistic Analysis of Rhetorical Strategies in Selected Narratives of Alice Walker" (2009) focuses on the linguistics and relates it to literature. Matunda intended to reveal the way characters dominate each other and the way different issues such as religion, race, and gender are discussed through these rhetorical devices.

In addition to Matunda, Walid El Hamamsy, in "Epistolary Memory: Revisiting Traumas in Women's Writing" (2010) intensifies the epistolary style and its importance in characters' self-formation. In this article, Hamamsy analyses The Color Purple by Alice Walker and emphasises that, through letter writing, the protagonist gains knowledge about her own life and her surroundings.

In addition to my contribution of merging two different concepts, I intend to apply Kristeva's concept of the speaking subject to the melancholic female eunuch as this concept by Kristeva has not been covered by Alice Walker scholars. As such, the significance of my study lies in its exploration of the way the sexually abused, mistreated, and overlooked melancholic female eunuchs behave, and how their use of language and other people's use of language shape their identity, and Kristeva's concept of the speaking subject.

1.6 Methodology

My study will examine Alice Walker's The Color Purple, The Third Life of Grange Copeland, Possessing the Secret of Joy, and By the Light of My Father's Smile in the light of Kristeva's melancholic subject, speaking subject, and Greer's female eunuch. I intend to merge Kristeva's melancholic subject with Greer's female eunuch and apply the notion of the melancholic female eunuch to emphasise the way men's sexual mistreatment of women leads them to feel a sense of loss of sexual desire, which causes melancholia. Later on, I will apply Kristeva's speaking subject in Walker's selected novels and focus on the narrative strategies to determine the way these melancholic female eunuchs' subjectivities are fluid and they are under the influence of their own desires, passions, and use of language and other characters' impressions of them.

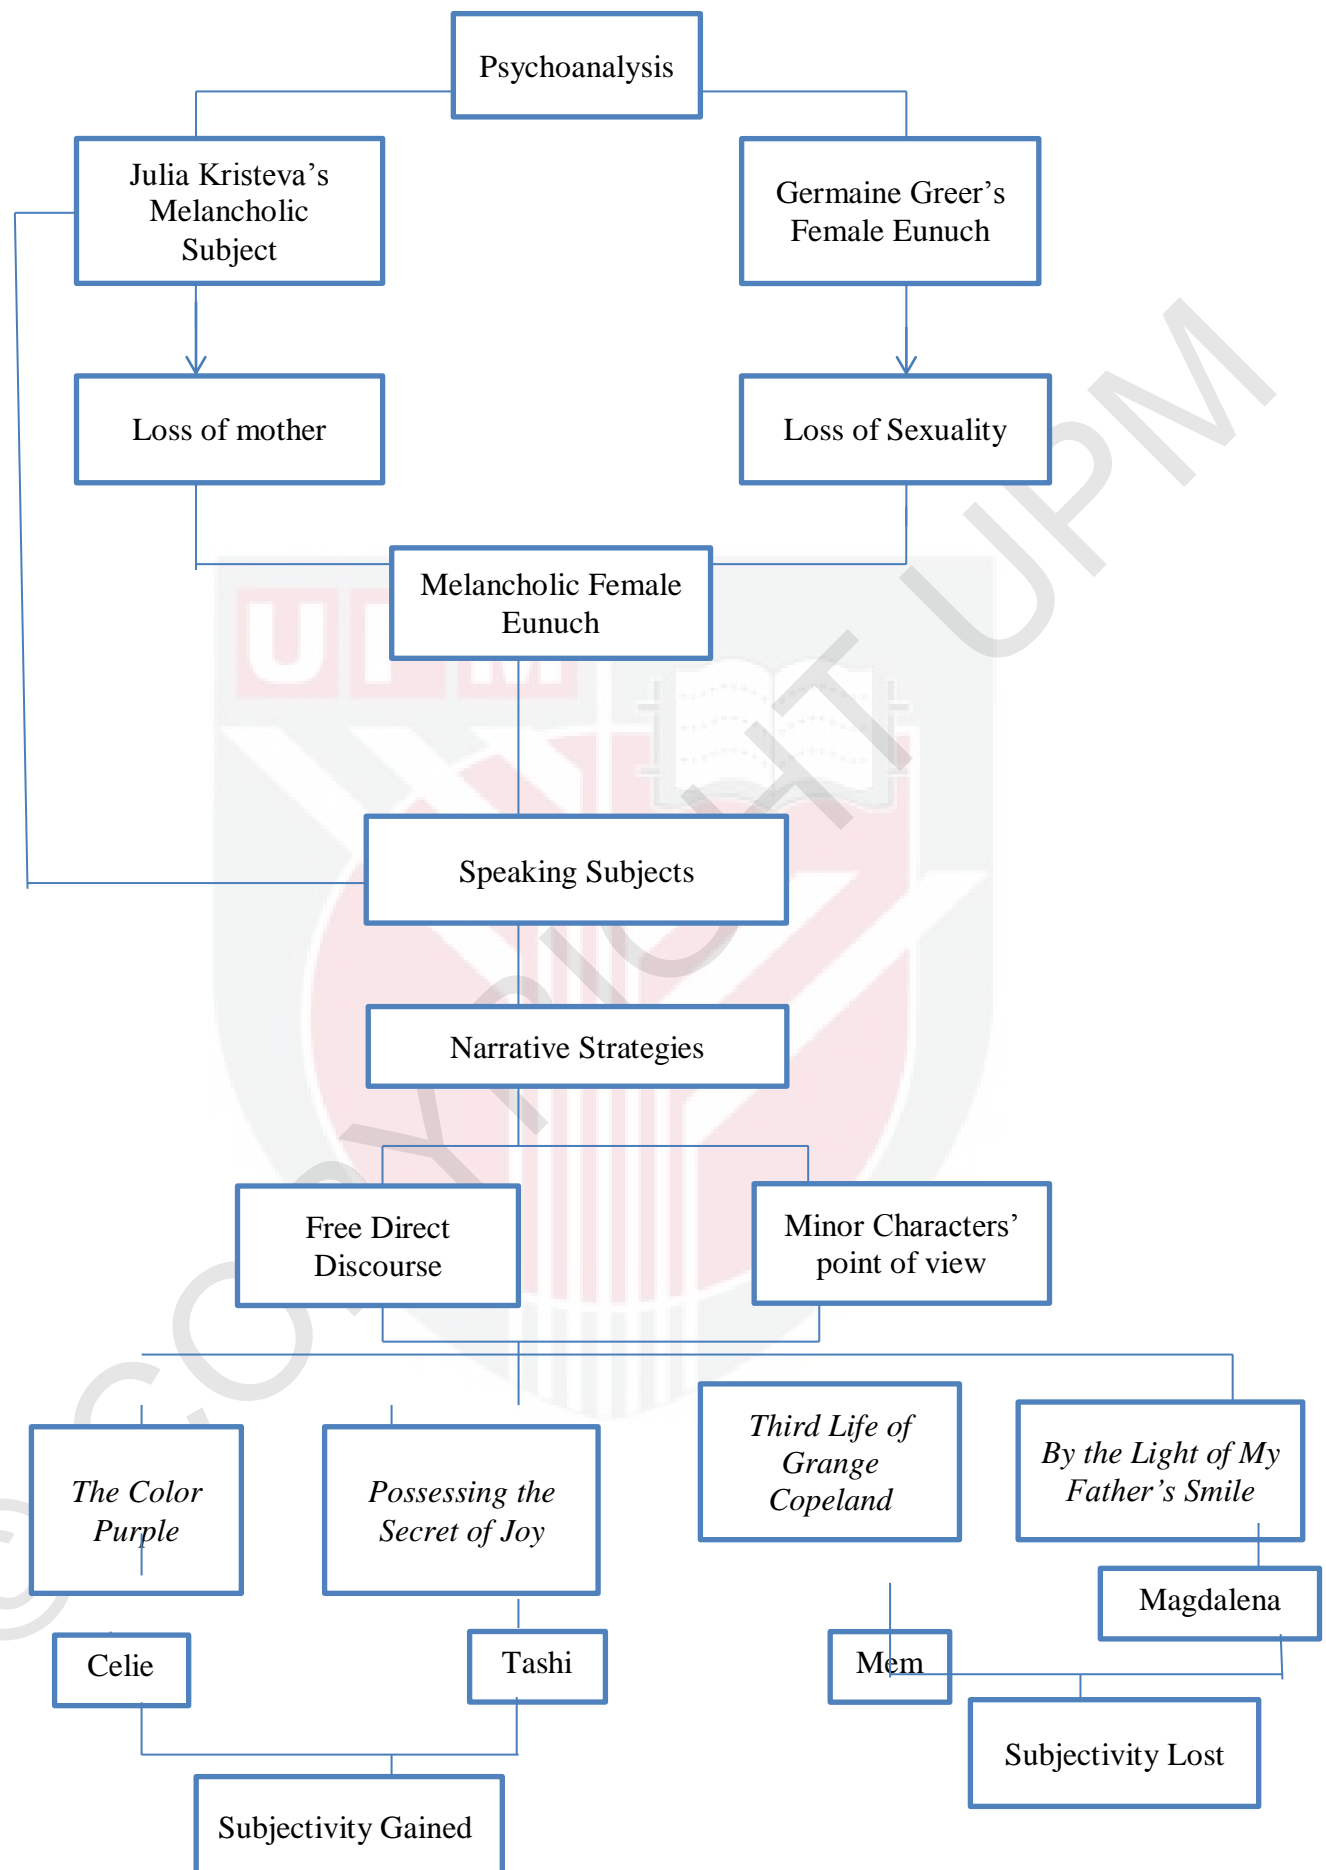

Figure 1: Methodology

1.7 Conceptual Framework

This section discusses the conceptual theories which were applied in the present study's analysis to Walker's The Color Purple, The Third Life of Grange Copeland, Possessing the Secret of Joy, and By the Light of My Father's Smile. One should notice that Kristeva's concepts, the melancholic subject and speaking subject, are selected for this study as "Kristeva persists in disturbing the already said" (Payne 169), she "always destroys the latest preconception, the one we thought we could be comforted by, the one we could be proud of" (Lodge 206). Further, Greer's female eunuch will be discussed.

1.7.1 The Semiotic and the Symbolic

Kristeva has theories about language, including the notions of the chora, the semiotic, and the symbolic. In her book, Revolution in Poetic Language, Kristeva states that language has two aspects: the affective, called the semiotic, and the denotating aspect, referred to as the symbolic. However, these two modalities are inseparable within the signifying process (Kristeva, Revolution 34). Kristeva emphasises that "the semiotic aspect of language is not independent of language, but underpins it" (Constellations 324). In fact, Kristeva is interested in the manner in which the semiotic flows through the ordered form of meaning (symbolic), and, conversely, the symbolic canalised into the semiotic, especially in Avant-garde literature. To express themselves, people use not only the denotating aspect, but also their inner desires; they make themselves via language. In fact, language and subjectivity have a dialectical relation. The following argument will focus on the chora, the semiotic, and the symbolic.

1.7.1.1 Semiotic Chora

Kristeva borrows the term chora from Plato's Timaeus, but she modifies it according to her theory and believes that from this space "the semiotic drives arise" (Kristeva, Revolution 35). In Plato's view, the chora is womb or receptacle; however, Kristeva considers it as a rhythm (and calls this rhythm the semiotic) that precedes language. In fact, Kristeva calls bodily drives and impulses semiotic. These drives move through the body of the subject who is not yet constituted as stable, and then the drives are arranged based on social and cultural constraints (Kristeva, Revolution 25). Kristeva sometimes refers to chora as semiotic chora because the chora is a site "from which the semiotic bursts forth" (Stokes-King 61). In Plato's theory, chora is a space in which the universe comes to existence. He explains how the universe was created, and, in Kristeva's theory, chora is a site for the infant's relation to her mother's body, and this kind of identification with the mother's body is one of the aspects of the semiotic. As the child has a tactile relation with her mother's body, the child's drives are oriented in a constructive way. However, these drives are destructive by themselves. A child's tactile relation to her mother's body leads them to a normal path. In the chora, their sexual drives are directed by the mother's body (Kristeva, Revolution 27). Also, "the kinetic functional stage of semiotic precedes the establishment of the sign" (Rivkin and Ryan 454). Kristeva considers the chora as a "non expressive totality formed by the drives and their stases in a motility that is as full of movement as it is regulated" and this motility precedes generating the meaning and the signifying practice (Kristeva, Revolution 25). Furthermore, Kristeva emphasised that its vocal and gestural organisation is subject to what we shall call an objective ordering, which is dictated by natural or socio-historical constraints such as the biological difference between the sexes or family structure (Revolution 27).

At first, the child uses gestures and sounds to express herself, but she is not aware that these utterances have their own distinctive meaning. Later on, the child realises that not only can she use language to indicate objects, but also she realises that she is separate from other people and her surroundings. Kristeva calls this stage the thetic break (Revolution 43). It is the first step in understanding the independent subjectivity through which the symbolic language which “posits discourse between subject and object comes into being” (Stokes-King 37). Through the thetic break, the child enters the social world, social norms and symbolic realm. In fact, “the thetic is the precondition for both enunciation and denotation” (Kristeva, Revolution 53). In order to come to the symbolic realm, the child unconsciously represses rhythmic drives. The more the child enters the symbolic, the more the subject represses the articulation of the spoken and written word. One can see that Kristeva’s theory of the thetic break is the same as Freud’s oedipal stage and Lacan’s mirror stage.

As Freud states, in the oedipal stage, the child understands that her mother is not as powerful as she thinks, and she understands that her mother lacks the male sexual organ. Therefore, her maternal attachment shifts to her father. At this stage “boys develop castration anxiety—a fear of losing the penis, but girls develop penis envy—a jealousy about not having a penis;” therefore, the child enters the realm of language in order to express this painful experience (Thurschwell 59). In other words, castration is separation of the subject from his mother and perception of this deficiency, which leads to the symbolic function (Kristeva, Revolution 47). In Lacanian theory, the same processes take place.

In the Lacanian concept, the mirror stage refers to the time when the child identifies herself with her image in the mirror. As she sees herself in the mirror, she understands that she is separate from her surroundings. Then the child uses language to indicate the Other beyond herself. Kristeva’s theories of the semiotic and the symbolic are almost the same as Lacan’s imaginary and the symbolic. In other words, the imaginary is the semiotic and the symbolic is Kristeva’s symbolic.

Influenced by Freudian and Lacanian theories, Kristeva assumes the thetic phase as the stage in which the child becomes able to learn grammar and syntax. In fact, the semiotic is a bridge to the symbolic. In the rhythmic space of the semiotic, which has no thesis and no position, “the signification is constituted” (Kristeva, Revolution 26). In other words, it is “a prerequisite for the development of the symbolic” (Stokes-King 39). Now the symbolic stage is shaped. The symbolic stage refers to the use of syntax and semantics. One should be aware that the symbolic and the semiotic aspects of language are not separable.

Kristeva differs from previous theoreticians and considers language as part of a dynamic signifying process. This means that not only bodily drives and impulses are expressed within language, but also, through it, the subjects gain their identity. In other words, language is both the expressions of orderly meaning and the subject’s energy and drives.

1.7.1.2 Interrelation of the Semiotic and the Symbolic

As mentioned before, in the chora, there were just rhythms and sounds, which are bodily sounds such as a pulse or heartbeat and gestures. Gradually, the child perceives that she is separate from her surroundings; therefore, she comes to use symbolic language. As Jones emphasises, “the symbolic aspect of language is logical, simple and stripped of stylistic, rhythmic, and poetic ambiguities...the symbolic order is the man’s world;” also the symbolic realm dominates and represses the bodily drives (56). The symbolic has the elements of signification and contains structure. Kristeva considers the symbolic language as “the patriarchal social structure,” and defines it as a language with two functions (Stokes-King 36-37). On the one hand, it permits one to access the order, and on the other hand, it represses unconscious thoughts. One should notice that “the semiotic phase becomes crucial to the signifying process within which no signifying operations could be realized” (Kristeva, Revolution 58). Kristeva adds that the symbolic, and therefore, syntax and all linguistic categories are a social effect of the relation to the others established through the objective constraints of biological differences and concrete, historical family structures (Revolution 29).

On the other hand, the semiotic is marked by “rhythm, intonation, gestures”(Jones 56). “Voice, gesture, colors, phonic, kinetic, or chromatic units and differences are the marks of these stases in the drives” that Kristeva considers as the semiotic (Kristeva, Revolution 28). One can trace the semiotic in word play, semantics, “rhythmic, melodic or intonational structures,” song, baby talk, echolalia, alliteration, onomatopoeia, portmanteau, and even colours in dreams that originate from the unconscious (Feral 12). As Kristeva states:

‘The semiotic’ takes us back to the pre-linguistic states of childhood where the child babbles the sounds he hears, or where he articulates rhythms, alliterations, or stresses, trying to imitate his surroundings. In this state the child does not yet process the necessary linguistic signs and thus there is no meaning in the strict sense of the term. (qtd. in Rice and Waugh 129)

Although these drives are the meaningful parts of language, they do not have any signification. In other words, these drives are like a language, but they are not ordered yet. The semiotic “resists organization and it is very chaotic, while Kristeva links the symbolic to rational world” (Sutcliffe 337). As Kristeva relates the symbolic to patriarchal social structure, she also considers the semiotic as maternal. The semiotic emotional expressions emerge unconsciously and without the speaker’s will. Although “we shall distinguish the semiotic (drives and their articulation) from the realm of signification...in other words, a realm of proposition,” the semiotic and the symbolic are interrelated even after the thetic break (Kristeva, Revolution 43). They have dialectic of mutual contradiction; this dialect produces the normal language. The two aspects of language are so interdependent that “without the symbolic we have only a delirium, while without the semiotic, language would be completely empty if not impossible”(Grodén and Kreiswirth 2).

Kristeva considers avant-garde literature as a reaction to the formal, symbolic language on which the writers of the French bourgeoisie focused. As poetry is a kind of creation, Kristeva assumes that poetry is the reassertion of the semiotic within the symbolic because the “creativity comes from drives outside the prosaic, the structures, the symbolic” (Stokes-King 43). Besides, the musicality of poetic language expresses the “unspeakable” events that language is not capable of asserting. In fact, the semiotic has a rhythmical and melodic structure shown in poetic language, and it transgresses symbolic and grammatical rules. Poetic language expresses the basic impulses of desires and fears that cannot be expressed in rational symbolic language. The poet resists the “prescribed social meaning” through the help of the semiotic to express these unspeakable desires (Cavanagh 292). Moreover, the avant-garde poets resist the grammatical order of the word and all the rules, and mostly focuses on the semiotic aspect of language, rather than its symbolic aspect. As such, “poetic language puts the subject in process/on trial through a network of marks and semiotic facilitations”(Kristeva, Revolution 58) and this “semiotic network gives ‘music’ to literature”(63), but this musicality is not without signification as the unity of reason which consciousness sketches out will always be shattered by the rhythm suggested by drives; repetitive rejection seeps in through “prosody,” and so forth, preventing the stasis of one meaning, one myth, and one logic(148).

As mentioned above, one should respect the fact that the signifying process is not unified, but is the result of drives; therefore, it does not produce a unified meaning. This idea leads to the fact that the subjectivity is not fixed but it is always in process. As a result, “the ‘subject’ is seen no longer as the source of meaning but as the site of meaning, and may therefore undergo a radical ‘dispersal’ of identity and loss of coherence”(Selden 141). This subject in process/on trial is always involved in a semiotic process; therefore, bodily energies and psychical marks are articulated in the subject’s speech. The term subject in process will be discussed in the following section.

1.7.2 Speaking Subject

In Kristeva’s theories, the subject is an effect of the signifying process; therefore, language and subjectivity have a mutual relationship. As language is in the process, and the subject and language are interrelated, the subject is in the process too. In fact, both language and the subject have their own processes, and through these processes, both of them are shaped. We refer to the subject as the speaking subject because, through language, the speaking subject “makes and unmakes himself” (Kristeva, Language 265). In other words “we do not speak language, language speaks us”(Thomas 77).

1.7.2.1 Subject in Process

Kristeva joins many disciplines to shape her theories. For example, she links psychoanalysis and linguistics to theorise the speaking subject. As mentioned before, Kristeva is influenced by Lacan, but one can trace many differences between her theories and those of Lacan’s.

For example, Lacan assumes that the child learns the culture and its disciplines from her father but Kristeva emphasises that the child learns everything from both the mother and the father. As mentioned previously, the chora is the maternal space. In the chora, the same as in Lacan’s imaginary realm, there is no gap between the mother and the child. Kristeva thinks that even in the chora, the child learns the language of civilisation; therefore, she contends that both the mother and the father educate the child. Therefore, “identification comes about under the domination of the maternal image, which is the one nearest to the child and which allows the child both to remain close and to distance itself”(Rice and Waugh 130).

The other difference between Lacan and Kristeva's theories is the presence of the drives in the process of signification. If one wants to juxtapose Kristeva's and Lacan's theories, it may be assumed that Kristeva's semiotic and the symbolic are somehow the same as Lacan's imaginary and symbolic realms, then the difference becomes apparent. In fact, Kristeva accepts Lacan's theory about the effect of language in subjectivity; but she believes that both the semiotic and the symbolic affect the child, a fact that Lacan has ignored.

In fact, Lacan emphasises the symbolic effect in the subject's construction and leaves aside the inner desires and drives. On the other hand, Kristeva notices the importance of bodily impulses, which she refers to as the semiotic in the subject formation. Otsuka mentions that "Kristeva claims that a child does not completely leave the semiotic behind, but carries residues of it even after entering into the symbolic"(2). Therefore, based on her theory, one can conclude that the subject is not as stable as the previous theoreticians had thought. As the subject is the subject of her inner drives, she does not have a stable subjectivity. Kristeva notices the "linguistic change in the status of the subject- his relation to the body, to others and to objects" (Kristeva, Revolution 15-16). In fact, the speaking subject is "a split subject influenced by bio-physiological processes (themselves already inescapably part of the signifying process; what Freud labeled 'drives'), and, on the other hand, by social constraints (family structures, modes of production, etc.)"(Newton 182). In short, "the subject is caught between instinctual drives and social practices within language"(Kristeva, Desire 97). This is what Kristeva calls subject in process/on trial:

'process' in the sense of process but also in the sense of a legal proceeding where the subject is committed to trial, because our identities in life are constantly called into question, brought to trial, overruled. (qtd. in Rice and Waugh 128-129)

To understand subject in process/on trial, one should remember Kristeva's semiotic and the symbolic. As Kristeva defines it, the semiotic is the unconscious impulses and bodily desires and these impulses are not stable. As the semiotic and the symbolic have a dialectic relation, and they are two aspects of language, there would not be any stable subject. As such, the "significance puts the subject in process/on trial" (Kristeva, Revolution 22). Elaborating Kristeva's theory, Robbins noted that one can notice that the subject is "always a split subject, divided between unconscious and conscious motivations, inhabiting both nature and culture"(127). In other words, as Otsuka observed, the subject is "always split between the semiotic and the symbolic"(1). The subject in process is a subject equally constituted by symbolic and semiotic elements. It is in this sense, therefore, that the subject is also a rhythmic reverberation in symbolic, a reverberation which is connotative of both union with, and separation from, the mother. (Fletcher 27)

Moreover, the subject is always in the process of becoming and developing. In other words, she is a heterogeneous subject and she is not fixed in the realm of the symbolic. As Bodner states, language constitutes the subject repeatedly (95).

In addition, one should notice that not only can the subject's inner drives influence the subject, but also people's presence can influence her subjectivity. The energies that flow among people and their communication can have a great effect on self-realisation. One can be influenced by energies, emotions, desires, and memories that other people have. Therefore, the subject is even in the process of the response to other's speech and desires. In fact, the speaking subject cannot stand on his own but she stands on "the fragile threshold as it stands on account of an impossible demarcation"(Kristeva, Powers 85). As Iannetta stated, "there are no stable individuals but rather permeable beings easily infected by the subjectivity of others"(218). Kristeva herself likens the speaking subject to a text. She believes that the meaning of an individual person is not fixed the same as each text does not have a fixed meaning, and she says that "as people are born into cultural and historical specificities of which they have both collective and individual experience, they are texts overwritten with traces of other texts or contexts"(Robbins 124). As Kristeva mentions, the subject is in process because she is developed through language. Moreover, she is on trial as she is "tested against the various contexts in which (s)he has [her] being"(Robbins 127).

1.7.3 Melancholia

Kristeva is influenced by Freud's theory of loss in her discussion of the melancholic subject. In her theory, she focuses on self-identity and connection between narcissism and melancholia. As she studied Freud's theory of death, she manages to formulate the notion of depression. Kristeva mentions that she will "speak of depression and melancholia without always distinguishing the particularities of the two ailments but keeping in mind their common structure" (Kristeva, Black Sun 10-11). Moreover, she claims that depression is the hidden "face of narcissus, the face that is to bear him away into death, but of which he is unaware while he admires himself in mirage"(5). In fact, Kristeva believes that melancholia is a disorder of self-identity and sense of loss. She defines melancholia as an abyss of sorrow, a noncommunicable grief that at times, and often on a long term basis, lays claims upon us to the extent of having us lose all interest in words, actions, and even life itself. (Kristeva, Black Sun, 3)

As the child mourns for the loss of the Thing, she cannot use language, and, as Kristeva holds, "the collapse of the symbolic is a tell-tale sign of melancholia"(Sabo 57). In the absence of the Thing, she feels loss and she cannot share this feeling with others. The melancholic subject expresses that "'I isolate myself from the world, 'I withdraw into my sadness, 'I do not speak, 'I cry. 'I kill myself'" (Kristeva, The Sense 47). Even though the melancholic subject speaks, she is a stranger to her mother tongue. In Kristeva's words, "the depressed speak of nothing, they have nothing to speak of: glued to the Thing, they are without objects"(Kristeva, Black Sun 51). The melancholic subject's sentences are ungrammatical, repetitious and monotonous. Moreover, she mentions that melancholic subjects utter sentences that are interrupted, exhausted, come to stand still. Even phrases they cannot formulate. A repetitive rhythm, a monotonous melody emerges and dominates the broken logical sequences, changing them into recurring, obsessive litanies. Finally, when that frugal musicality becomes exhausted in its turn, or simply does not succeed in becoming established on account of the pressure of silence, the melancholy person appears to stop cognizing as well as uttering, sinking into the blankness as asymbolia or the excess on unorderable cognitive chaos. (Kristeva, Black Sun 33)

The melancholic subject can bring her mother back through the use of language, and if the child cannot enter the symbolic realm, she will have a heterogeneous subjectivity rather than a unified one. Iannetta points out that the melancholic subject becomes an “I” through language. In fact, a traumatic separation from object of love is the necessary foundation of human identity. As a product of individuation, this crisis is in essence individual, and is, therefore, timeless and unrecorded in history (194-195).

The melancholic writer attempts to enter the symbolic realm, name the lost object that she mourns, and, as a result of naming, she is able to share her sense of loss with other people and express her sadness. However, Kristeva holds that the writer should have the experience of loss to be able to express it in her writing. As such “the texts of Marguerite Duras are about suffering, the experience of sadness, death, suicide; as are the texts of Dostoyevsky. The texts of Nerval, with all their references to the cultural tradition, show us to what extent sadness and suffering can be themes” (Rice and Waugh 133). Kristeva analyzed Duras, Nerval, and Dostoyevsky’s works, and she believes that all of them expressed their suffering and loss that they have faced in life, within their works; therefore, the writers’ biographies are important when analysing their works as there are many traces of their biographies reflected in their writing.

As mentioned before, the child is in his mother’s embrace and all her needs are satisfied without even asking for them. If this child loses her mother before recognising that her mother is Other to her, she cannot name things. Kristeva holds that the child king becomes irredeemably sad before uttering his first words; this is because he has been irrevocably, desperately separated from the mother, a loss that causes him to try to find her again, along with other objects of love, first in imagination, then in words. (Kristeva, Black Sun 6)

Later she can use language, but her ability to name is lost. This child may have a normal life, but years later she will sink into deep depression. This depression has symptoms like moving slowly, sleeping all the time, talking less, and being listless. This depressed subject mourns for what she has lost. The subject both loves and hates the object of loss. She loves it as she cannot do without it and she hates it as she cannot have it. The subject suffers from this loss as she considers it part of herself and not separate from herself. The subject cannot communicate her sense of loss as she is drowned within her sadness and she cannot share it within language. The lost Thing is unnamable as the subject cannot define it within the language. The melancholic subject must separate herself from the lost Thing and identify herself with her father in order to get rid of the melancholia. The melancholic subject can get rid of her sadness by reaching the realm of signs. The melancholic writer intends to name the unnamable Thing. The melancholic writer turns her sadness into language and shares it with other people.

1.7.4 Female Eunuch

Germaine Greer argues that all these years women have been objects of male desires; women have not been treated as subjects who have independent identity and subjectivity. Their sexual desires have been silenced and they have not had any right to express their libidinal desires. Greer emphasises that it is exactly the elements of quest in her sexuality which female is taught to deny in her sexual contacts, but (for in some subliminal way the connection is understood) in her contacts, from infancy onward, so that when she becomes aware of her sex the pattern has sufficient force of inertia to prevail over new forms of desire and curiosity. This is the condition which is meant by the term female eunuch. (The Female Eunuch 78)

Female sexuality is a taboo subject and it is either masked or misrepresented within societies. As aforementioned, women have been treated as objects, especially sexual objects, whose role has been to gratify men's sexual desires. However, their own sexuality has been denied, and they have been denied any knowledge about their sexual needs and their body as this information is censored within societies, and thus women's sexual organs are as mysterious to them as it is forbidden for them to explore their genitals. Greer adds that "every girl child is conceived as a whole woman but from the time of her birth to her death she is progressively disabled" (The Whole Woman 9). They have been castrated as their needs have been overlooked by the system which considers men's needs above women's desires.

It is time for women to have personality, passion, dignity and integrity; unlike the past that they have been muted and marginalized and their sexuality was overlooked. They should recognize their sisters and supporters and with their help they can speak out their desires.

The concepts of melancholic subject and speaking subject are the terms defined by Kristeva so that they structure subjectivity. By adding Greer's female eunuch, I emphasize the barriers on subject formation. In the following chapters, I am going to apply the concepts that I have explained to Walker's selected novels.

1.8 Justification of Text Selection

African Americans suffered from various losses in their lives. Different authors portrayed all the plights that black women undergo, among them are Angelou, Morrison and Walker. However, my study is devoted to Walker's novels as all the selected novels illustrate the loss of mother or mother figures and its effect on female characters.

Besides, Walker was courageous enough to cover those taboo subjects that those previous authors did not dare to cover. Subject matters such as female circumcision, rape, free sexual relationship and imposed pregnancies are discussed in Walker's novels which are related to Greer's female eunuch and the way women's sexuality has been masked and ignored by the society.

I have selected these four novels from among Walker's novels as they portray melancholic female eunuchs, who deal with the pain of loss, of love, and of individual and sometimes communal crises. The texts reflect these issues through commitment to pain and loss, which is considered melancholia. Furthermore, all these texts share an underlying sense of the need of supporters in women's lives as Greer believes that women should recognise their sisters and supporters to know their bodies and improve their situations within society. Moreover, based on my reading, I found that the melancholic female characters and the theme of being sexually castrated have not been covered by the critics of these four selected novels.

1.9 Definition of Terms

This section is devoted to the terms which used within this thesis.

Speaking Subject

Kristeva notices that the subject is not stable as she is not only under the influence of her own desire and language but also under the influence of other people's speech and desires. "Because the subject is always both semiotic and symbolic, no signifying system he produces can be either "exclusively semiotic" or "exclusively symbolic", and is instead necessarily marked by an indebtedness to both" (Revolution 24). The speaking subject is no longer "considered a phenomenological transcendental ego nor the Cartesian ego but rather a subject in process/on trial" (37). The subject shapes her subjectivity through the use of language and interaction with other people.

Melancholia

Melancholia, as it used to be called, is mourning for something lost. In fact, the sad child king becomes irredeemably sad before uttering his words. This is because he has been irrevocably, desperately separated from the mother, a loss that causes him to try to find her again, along with other objects of love, first in imagination, then in words.

However, the lost object can be an internal object, as well, and the melancholic subject mourns for it.

Female Eunuch

From her infancy, the female child learns to deny her sexual organ and any quest in her sexuality. Later on, she cannot talk about her sexual needs and she cannot have any knowledge about her body. Greer refers to this condition as that of the female eunuch.

1.10 Structure of the Thesis

As demonstrated in this chapter, the present study discusses Walker's selected novels in light of Kristeva's melancholic subject and speaking subject and Greer's female eunuch with the first chapter of this study devoted to the general introduction. The second chapter is concerned with the review of literature. The third chapter is dedicated to Walker's The Color Purple and Possessing the Secret of Joy as both highlight the presence of emotional supporters in melancholic female eunuchs' lives and their effects on them, and application of Kristeva's and Greer's concepts. The fourth chapter discusses the Third Life of Grange Copeland and By the Light of My Father's Smile as both of these two novels focus on the absence of the emotional supporter and its effect on melancholic female eunuchs, and application of Kristeva's and Greer's concepts to them. Finally, the fifth chapter sums up the whole discussion and recommends further research in this area.

REFERENCES

- Abbandonato, Linda. "'A View from 'Elsewhere'': Subversive Sexuality and the Rewriting of the Heroine's Story in The Color Purple." PMLA. Publications of the Modern Language Association of America 106.5 (1991): 1106. ProQuest.Web. 11 Oct. 2014.
- Andermahr, Sonya. "Mourning, Melancholia and Melodrama in Contemporary Women's Grief Fiction: Kim Edwards's the Memory Keeper's Daughter." Hecate 37.1 (2011): 27,45,186. ProQuest.Web. 11 Oct. 2014.
- Bailey, Jennifer Anne McNamara. "An Abyss of Sorrow": Mourning and Melancholia in 19th-Century Women's Fiction." Lehigh University, 2001 Ann Arbor ProQuest.Web. 4 Oct. 2014 .
- Bates, Gerri. Alice Walker: A Critical Companion. Westport: Greenwood Press, 2005. Print.
- Berlant, Lauren. "Race, Gender, and Nation in The Color Purple." Critical Inquiry 14 (Summer, 1988): 831-859. Print.
- Bloom, Harold. Alice Walker. New York: Chelsea House Pub, 2007. Print.
- Bodner, Erin Wood. "Murmur it to the Mud": The Speaking Subject in Samuel Beckett's "how it is". Order No. MQ87195 University of Calgary (Canada), 2003 Ann Arbor ProQuest.Web. 11 Oct. 2014 .
- Brisley, Lucy. "Melancholia and Victimhood in Boualem Sansal's Le Village De l'Allemand: Ou Le Journal Des Frères Schiller." Research in African Literatures 44.1 (2013): 55-74. ProQuest.Web. 4 Oct. 2014 .
- Brogan, Jacqueline Vaught. "The Hurston/Walker/Vaughn Connection: Feminist Strategies in American Fiction." Women's Studies 28.2 (1999): 185. Academic Search Complete.Web. 2 Nov. 2012.
- Burns, Ann. "By the Light of My Father's Smile." Library Journal 123.18 (1998): 101-0. ProQuest.Web. 27 June 2014.
- Butler, R. B. "Making a Way Out of No Way: The Open Journey in Alice Walker's The Third Life of Grange Copeland." Black American Literature Forum 22.1 (1988): 65-79. Print.
- Butler, Rita C. "The Whiteness of it all: Patriarchal Dysfunction and Feminist Consciousness in Zora Neale Hurston's 'Seraph on the Suwanee'." Order No. 1411545 Florida Atlantic University, 2002 Ann Arbor ProQuest. 23 Feb. 2016 .
- "By the Light of My Father's Smile." Washington: National Public Radio, 1998. ProQuest.Web. 29 Aug. 2014.

- Byerman, Keith, E. Fingering the Jagged Grains: Tradition and Form in Recent Black Fiction. Athens: The University of Georgia Press, 1985. Print.
- Byrd, Rudolph P. "By the Light of My Father's Smile." African American Review 33.4 (1999): 719-22. ProQuest. Web. 27 June 2014.
- Cavanagh, Clare. "Pseudo-Revolution in Poetic Language: Julia Kristeva and the Russian Avant-Garde." Slavic Review 52.2 (Summer, 1993): 283-297. Print.
- Cheung, King-Kok. "'Don't Tell': Imposed Silences in The Color Purple and The Woman Warrior." PMLA. Publications of the Modern Language Association of America 103.2 (1988): 162-. ProQuest Central. Web. 3 Feb. 2013.
- Christian, Barbara. Black Women Novelists: The Development of a Tradition, 1892-1976. Westport, Connecticut: The Greenwood Press. 1980. Print.
- Coleman, Lisa M. "Can we be Helped? A Meditation on Black Womanhood, Social Uplift, and Melancholia in the Age of Self-Actualization, 1992—2002". Order No. 3329861 New York University, 2008 Ann Arbor ProQuest. 23 Feb. 2016 .
- Cooklin, Katherine Lowery. Poststructural Subjects and Feminist Concerns: An Examination of Identity, Agency and Politics in the Works of Foucault, Butler and Kristeva. Order No. 3143675 The University of Texas at Austin, 2004 Ann Arbor ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.
- Culbertson, Roberta. "Embodied Memory, Transcendence, and Telling: Recounting Trauma, Re-Establishing the Self." New Literary History 26.1 (1995): 169-. Arts & Humanities Full Text; ProQuest Central. Web. 3 Feb. 2013.
- Cutter, Martha J. "Philomela Speaks: Alice Walker's Revisioning of Rape Archetypes in The Color Purple." MELUS 25.3 (2000): 161-80. ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014 .
- DeCrescenzo, Teresa. "Alice Walker: A Life." Lesbian News 30.6 (2005): 35. Academic Search Premier. Web. 2 Nov. 2012.
- Derrida, Jacques. Monolingualism of the Other: Or, The Prosthesis of Origin (Cultural Memory in the Present). Trans. Patrick Mensah. Stanford: Stanford University Press, 1998.
- Elliott, Anthony. "New Individualist Configurations and the Social Imaginary: Castoriadis and Kristeva." European Journal of Social Theory 15.3 (2012): 349-65. Sociological Abstracts. Web. 3 Feb. 2013.
- Esgalhado, Barbara Duarte. The Subject of Writing: A Kristevan Analysis of Fernando Pessoa's Subjectivity in "The Book of Disquietude". Order No. 9838920 Columbia University, 1998 Ann Arbor ProQuest. Web. 19 May 2015.
- Fanon, Frantz. A Dying Colonialism. New York: Grove Press, 1967. Print.
- Faucoult, Michel. The History of Sexuality, Vol. 1: An Introduction. Trans. Robert Hurley. Visalia: Vintage Publication, 1990. Print.

- Féral, Josette, Julia Kristeva, and Penny Kritzman. "China, Women and the Symbolic: An Interview with Julia Kristeva." SubStance 5.13 (1976): 9-18. Print.
- Fiske, Shany. "Piecing the Patchwork Self: A Reading of Walker's The Color Purple." The Explicator 66.3 (2008): 150-3. ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.
- Fitzgerald, Stephanie. Alice Walker: Author and Social Activist. Oakland: Compass Point Books, 2008. Print.
- Flatley, Jonathan. "Modernism and Melancholia: Affect and Aesthetics in the Imagining of Alternative Modernities." Order No. 9710228 Duke University, 1996 Ann Arbor ProQuest. 23 Feb. 2016 .
- Fletcher, John, and Michael Benjamin. Abjection, Melancholia and Love. London: Routledge, 1990. Print.
- Floyd-Thomas, Stacey M., and Laura Gillman. "Subverting Forced Identities, Violent Acts, and the Narrativity of Race: A Diasporic Analysis of Black Women's Radical Subjectivity in Three Novel Acts." Journal of Black Studies 32 (May, 2002): 528-556. Print.
- Freud, Sigmund. "Mourning and Melancholia." 1917. The Standard Edition of the Complete Psychological Works of Sigmund Freud. Ed. James Strachey. Trans. James Strachey et al. Vol. 14. London: Hogarth P and The Institute of Psycho- Analysis, 1957. 243-58.
- Gaston, Karen Carmean. The Theme of Female Self-Discovery in The Novels of Judith Rossner, Gail Godwin, Alice Walker, and Toni Morrison. Order No. 8019867 Auburn University, 1980 Ann Arbor ProQuest. Web. 4 Oct. 2014.
- Gates, Henry Louis, Jr. "Color Me Zora: Alice Walker's (Re)Writing of the Speakerly Text." Intertextuality and Contemporary American Fiction. Ed. Patrick O'Donnell and Robert Con Davis. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1989. Print.
- . The Signifying Monkey: A Theory of African-American Literary Criticism. New York: Oxford University Press. 1989. Print.
- Gieni, Justine Elizabeth Maeve. Hysterical (r)Evolution: The Creation of Embodied Language in Alice Walker's "The Color Purple", Toni Amos's "Little Earthquakes", and Frances Driscoll's "The Rape Poems". Order No. MR20212 The University of Regina (Canada), 2006 Ann Arbor ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.
- Gilyard, Keith. "Genopsycholinguisticide and the Language Theme in African-American Fiction." College English 52.7 (Nov., 1990): 776-786. Print.
- Gordon, Natasha M. "'Tonguing the Body': Placing Female Circumcision within African Feminist Discourse." A Journal of Opinion (1997): 24-27. Print.
- Gourdine, A. K. M. "Postmodern Ethnography and the Womanist Mission: Postcolonial Sensibilities in Possessing the Secret of Joy." African American Review 30 (1996): 237-244. Print.

Greer, Germaine. The Female Eunuch. New York: Harper Perennial Modern Classics, 2008. Print.

---. The Whole Woman. New York: First Anchor Books Edition, 2000. Print.

Greer, Margaret Rich. "Maria de Zayas and The Female Eunuch." Journal of Spanish Cultural Studies 2.1 (2001): 41-53. Print.

Griffin, Farah J. "Alice Walker, Turning the Page for Black Women." The Washington Post Oct 06 2004: 0. ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Groden, Michael, and Martin Kreiswirth. The Johns Hopkins Guide to Literary Theory and Criticism. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1997. Print.

Hale, Gwendolyn Nicole. "'Tis Hard to Dance with One Shoe": The Failure of the Fathers in Walker's The Color Purple and McCourt's Angela's Ashes". Order No. 1404097 East Tennessee State University, 2001 Ann Arbor ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Hall, James C. "Towards A Map Of Mis(Sed) Reading: The Presence of Absence in The Color Purple." African American Review 26.1 (1992): 89. Academic Search Premier. Web. 2 Nov. 2012.

---. "The Color Purple." African American Review 26.1 (1992): 89. Academic Search Premier. Web. 2 Nov. 2012.

Hall, Stephanie La'Chelle. African-American Women and Their Endeavor for Self-determination: in Alice Walker's Novels, The Third Life of Grange Copeland, Meridian, and The Color Purple. Denton: Texas Woman's University, 1990. Print.

Hamamsy, Walid El. "Epistolary Memory: Revisiting Traumas in Women's Writing." Comparative Poetics 30(2010): 150-175. Print.

Hamilton, Cynthia. "Alice Walker's Politics or the Politics of The Color Purple." Journal of Black Studies 18 (1988): 379-91. Applied Social Sciences Index and Abstracts (ASSIA). Web. 3 Feb. 2013.

Hankinson, Stacie Lynn. "From Monotheism to Pantheism: Liberation from Patriarchy in Alice Walker's The Color Purple." The Midwest Quarterly 38.3 (1997): 320-8. ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Heilbrun, Carolyn G. Reinventing Womanhood. New York: W. W. Norton & Company. 1993.

Henstra, Sarah Margaret. "Wisdom Says Forget, the Body Howls": Melancholia and Laughter in Jeanette Winterson's 'Written on the Body'". Order No. MQ28583 The University of Western Ontario (Canada), 1997 Ann Arbor ProQuest. Web. 19 May 2015.

- Hernton, Calvin C. "Who's Afraid of Alice Walker? The Color Purple as Slave Narrative." The Sexual Mountain and Black Women Writers. Adventures in Sex, Literature, and Real Life. New York: Anchor Press, 1987. 1-36. Print.
- Hesford, Wendy S. "On the Winds and Waves of Imagination: Transnational Feminism and Literature." Research in African Literatures 34.2 (2003): 232-3. ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.
- Hogue, W. Lawrence. "History, the Feminist Discourse, and Alice Walker's The Third Life of Grange Copeland." MELUS 12.2 (1985): 45-62. Print.
- Hooks, Bell. Black Looks. Cambridge: South End Press, 1992. Print.
- Hosseinfar, Maryam. Rewriting Identity in Kate Chopin's The Awakening and Sylvia Plath's The Bell Jar. Diss. University Putra Malaysia, 2012. Print.
- Iannetta, Maria Elena. Literary Melancholia, Or the Refusal to Mourn: Amnesia and Anamnesis. Memories of Love, Loss, and Abjection in Feminine Writing. Order No. 3057709 University of California, Santa Cruz, 2002 Ann Arbor ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.
- Johnson, Cheryl Lynn. A Womanist Way of Speaking: An Analysis of Language use in Alice Walker's "The Color Purple", Toni Morrison's "Tar Baby" and Gloria Naylor's "The Women of Brewster Place". Order No. 8907059 University of Michigan, 1988 Ann Arbor ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.
- Jones, Ann, R. "Julia Kristeva on Femininity: The Limits of a Semiotic Politics." Feminist Review 18 (Winter, 1984): 56-73. Print.
- June, Pamela B. "Subverting Heteronormativity: Another Look At Alice Walker's By The Light Of My Father's Smile." Women's Studies 40.5 (2011): 600-619. Scopus. Web. 23 Sept. 2013.
- Kanneh, Kandiatu. African Identities : Race, Nation, and Culture in Ethnography, Pan-Africanism, and Black Literatures. London: Routledge, 1998. Print.
- Kirchmayer, Katharina. Sites of Resistance in Alice Walker and Leslie Silko. Munich: GRIN Verlag, 2013. Print.
- Knadle, Charlene. "Contemporary American Writers of Desperate Survival: Edward Albee, Maya Angelou, Pat Conroy and Leslie Marmon Silko". Order No. 1411545 St. John's University, 1998, Arbor ProQuest. 23 Feb. 2016 .
- Kristeva, Julia. Black Sun: Depression and Melancholia. Trans. Leon S. Roudiez. New York: Columbia University Press, 1980. Print.
- . "Europhilia, Europhobia." Constellations 5 (1998): 321-332. Print.
- . The Sense and Non-Sense of Revolt. Trans. Jeanine Herman. New York: Columbia University Press, 2000. Print.

Kristeva, Julia, and Arthur Goldhammer. "Stabat Mater." Poetics Today 6 Perspectives (1985): 133-152. Print.

Kristeva, Julia. About Chinese Women. New York: Marion Boyars Publishers, 1993. Print.

----. Desire in Language: A Semiotic Approach to Literature and Art. Trans. Thomas Gora. New York: Columbia University Press, 1980. Print.

---. Language, the Unknown: An Initiation into Linguistics. Trans. Anne Menke. New York: Columbia University Press, 1989. Print.

---. Powers of Horror, An Essay on Abjection. Trans. Leon S. Roudiez. New York: Columbia University Press, 1982. Print.

---. Revolution in poetic Language. Trans. Margaret Waller. New York: Columbia University Press, 1984. Print.

LaGrone, Kheven. Alice Walker's The Color Purple. New York: Rodopi, 2009. Print.

Landers, Nedhera. "By the Light of My Father's Smile." Lambda Book Report 12 1998: 30. ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Lare-Assogba, Yendountien. Women's Strategies for Survival in the Works of Alice Walker and Mariama Ba. Order No. 1493323 University of Arkansas, 2011 Ann Arbor ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Lauret, Maria. Alice Walker. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2011. Print.

Lazo, Caroline Evensen. Alice Walker: Freedom Writer. Minneapolis: Twenty-First Century Books, 2000. Print.

Lee, Myungho. "America and the Tasks of Mourning: William Faulkner's and Toni Morrison's Works of Grieving." Order No. 3021915 State University of New York at Buffalo, 2001 Ann Arbor ProQuest. 23 Feb. 2016 .

Lechte, John and Maria Margaroni. Julia Kristeva: Live Theory. London: Continuum, 2004. Print.

Lee, Su Kim. "Exploring the Relationship between Language, Culture and Identity." GEMA: Online Journal of Language Studies, 3(2) (2003), 64-76.

Lodge, David. Modern Criticism and Theory. New Jersey: Pearson Education, 2000. Print.

MacDonald, Tanis Louise. The Daughter's Consolation: Melancholia and Subjectivity in Canadian Women's Paternal Elegies. Order No. NR07056 University of Victoria (Canada), 2005 Ann Arbor ProQuest. Web. 4 Oct. 2014.

Maleki, Naser. and Pedram Lalbakhsh. "Black Woman, Indoctrination of the Male, and Subversion of the Patriarchy in Ngugi's Weep Not, Child." 3L; Language, Linguistics and Literature, The Southeast Asian Journal of English Language Studies 18.4 (2012): 65-74. Print.

Maples, Mistica D. Purple as Symbol and Characterizer in Alice Walker's "The Color Purple". Order No. 1441522 University of South Alabama, 2007 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Matunda, Robert Stephen Mokaya. A Linguistic Analysis of Rhetorical Strategies in Selected Narratives of Alice Walker. Order No. 3396405 Morgan State University, 2009 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

McCray, April Letitia. "Unholy Matrimony: Marriage and Identity in Twentieth Century African-American Women's Fiction." Order No. 3631290 Florida State University, 2011 Ann ArborProQuest. 23 Feb. 2016 .

Mitchell, Marea. "Ambitious Women and Strange Monsters: Simone De Beauvoir and Germaine Greer." Hecate 26.1 (2000): 98-106. ProQuest. Web. 29 Aug. 2014.

Moi, Toril. The Kristeva Reader. New York: Wiley-Blackwell, 1991. Print.

Moore, Paige Alessandra. Alice Walker: A Literary Genealogist. Order No. MQ34318 University of Alberta (Canada), 1998 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Newton, K.M. Twentieth-Century Literary Theory. London: Macmillan, 1990. Print.

No Person is Your Friend Who Demands Your Silence, Or Denies Your Right to Grow. Alice Walker. "Cape Times Mar 27 2012: 8. ProQuest. 11 Oct. 2014 .

Nubukpo, Komla Messan. Through Their Sisters' Eyes: The Representation of Black Men in The Novels of Toni Morrison, Alice Walker, and Toni Cade Bambara. Order No. 8724712 Boston University, 1987 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 4 Oct. 2014.

O. Mason, Jr., Theodore. "Alice Walker's The Third Life of Grange Copeland: The Dynamics of Enclosure." Callaloo 39 (Spring 1985): 297-309. Print.

O'Brian, John. Interviews with Black Writers. New York: Liverwright, 1973. Print.

Olsen, Tillie. Silences. New York: The Feminist Press at CUNY, 2003. Print.

Opyr, Linda Elena. The Black Woman in the Novels of Alice Walker and Toni Morrison. Order No. 8900582 St. John's University (New York), 1988 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 4 Oct. 2014.

Otsuka, Rena. "Subject in Process": Modernist Characterization in Virginia Woolf's "Mrs. Dalloway" and "To the Lighthouse". Order No. 1458068 California State University, Dominguez Hills, 2008 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Payne, Michael. Reading Theory, an Introduction to Lacan, Derrida, and Kristeva. New Jersey: Blackwell Publisher, 1993. Print.

- Pifer, Lynn A. Representations of Revolutionary Transformation in the Novels of Alice Walker. Order No. 9210639 State University of New York at Buffalo, 1991 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 20 May 2015 .
- Pifer, Lynn, and Tricia Slusser. "'Looking at the Back of Your Head': Mirroring Scenes in Alice Walker's The Color Purple and Possessing the Secret of Joy." MELUS 23.4 (1998): 47-57. ProQuest.Web. 11 Oct. 2014.
- Plumley, William. "Sex and the Spirit: Alice Walker Pits Two Paradigms of Sexuality." Sunday Gazette - Mail Apr 25 1999: 0.ProQuest. Web. 29 Aug. 2014.
- Proudfit, Charles L. "Celie's Search for Identity: A Psychoanalytic Developmental Reading of Alice Walker's The Color Purple." Contemporary Literature 32.1 (1991): 12. ProQuest.Web. 11 Oct. 2014.
- Quashie, Kevin Everod. "The Other Dancer as Self: Girlfriend Selfhood in Toni Morrison's Sula and Alice Walker's The Color Purple." Meridians 2 (2001): 187-217. Print.
- Radden, Jennifer. The Nature of Melancholy: From Aristotle to Kristeva. London: Oxford University Press, 2002. Print.
- Rice, Philip, and Patricia Waugh. Modern Literary Theory A Reader. London: Edward Arnold, 1989. Print.
- Richards, C. S. On the Winds and Waves of Imagination: Transnational Feminism and Literature. New York: Garland Publication, 2000. Print.
- Rivkin, Julie, and Michael Ryan. Literary Theory: An Anthology. New York: Blackwell Publisher, 2000. Print.
- Robbins, Ruth. Literary Feminism. New York: Palgrave, 2000. Print.
- Robinson, Cynthia Cole. "The Evolution Of Alice Walker." Women's Studies 38.3 (2009): 293-311. Academic Search Premier. Web. 2 Nov. 2012.
- Royster, P. M. "In Search of our Fathers' Arms: Alice Walker's Persona of the Alienated Darling." Black American Literature Forum 20 (1986): 347-370. Print.
- Russell-Robinson, Joyce. "African Female Circumcision and the Missionary Mentality." A Journal of Opinion 25(1997): 54-57. Print.
- Sabo, Peter J. Impossible Mourning: Lamentations as a Text of Melancholia. Order No.MR68042 University of Alberta (Canada), 2010 Ann ArborProQuest.Web. 11 Oct. 2014.
- Sample, Maxine. "Walker's Possessing the Secret of Joy." The Explicator 58.3 (2000): 169-172. Print.
- Sampson-Choma, Tosha. Identity in Motion: The Symbiotic Connection between Migration and Identity in Four 20th Century Novels by African Diasporic

Women Writers. Order No. 3449913 The University of Nebraska - Lincoln, 2011 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Selden, Raman, Peter Widdowson, and Peter Brooker. A Reader's Guide to Contemporary Literary Theory. London: Prentice Hall, 1997. Print.

Selzer, Linda. "Race and Domesticity in The Color Purple." African American Review 29.1 (1995): 67-. ProQuest Central. Web. 3 Feb. 2013.

Shukla, Shilpa, and Niroj Banerji. The Shadowed Identity: A study of Alice Walker's The Color Purple. Academic Research International 2.2 (2012): 724-729. ProQuest. Web. <<http://search.proquest.com/docview/1034970042?accountid=27932>>

Steinberg, Sybil S. "By the Light of My Father's Smile." Publishers Weekly 245.40 (1998): 44. ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Stokes-King, Lisa. "Lovely Shapes and Sounds Intelligible": Kristevan Semiotic and Coleridge's Language of the Unconscious. Order No. MR28580 McGill University (Canada), 2006 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Su, Tsu Chung. "Writing the Melancholic: The Dynamics of Melancholia in Julia Kristeva's Black Sun." Concentric: Literary and Cultural Studies 31.1 (January 2005): 163-191. Print.

Sutcliffe, Benjamin M. "Reading the Kristevan Semiotic and Symbolic: Nina Sadur's "Kol'tsa" and Marina Kulakova's "Rekapoimeni Master"." Canadian Slavonic Papers 45.3/4 (2003): 337. Academic Research Library, ProQuest. Web. 6 Aug. 2011.

Tai, Ng-Chan. "The Inner Light Of Alice Walker." Ascent Magazine 34 (2007): 16-21. SPORT Discus with Full Text. Web. 2 Nov. 2012.

Tavormina, M. Teresa. "Dressing the Spirit: Clothworking and Language in The Color Purple." The Journal of Narrative Technique 16 (Fall, 1986): 220-230. Print.

Taylor, Carole Anne. "Humor, Subjectivity, Resistance: The Case of Laughter in The Color Purple." Texas Studies in Literature and Language 36.4 (1994): 462- 482. ProQuest Central. Web. 3 Feb. 2013.

Taylor, Nicole Janneen. The Camera is Mightier than the Pen: Resistance, Revolution, and Revision in the Film Adaptations of Alice Walker's "The Color Purple", Zora Neale Hurston's "Their Eyes Were Watching God", and Toni Morrison's "Beloved". Order No. 3283274 Howard University, 2007 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Terzieva, Rossitsa. Stories of the Unconscious: Sub-Versions in Freud, Lacan, and Kristeva. Order No. 3223915 The George Washington University, 2006 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 19 May 2015.

Tettenborn, Éva. "Melancholia as Resistance in Contemporary African American Literature." MELUS 31.3 (2006): 101,121,189-190. ProQuest. Web. 4 Oct. 2014.

---. Empowering the Past: Mourning and Melancholia in Twentieth-Century African American Literature. Order No. 3051873 State University of New York at Binghamton, 2002 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 4 Oct. 2014.

Thomas, Joan. "Sex and the Single Daughter if Alice Walker's New Novel Sounds Like a Treatise, it Is - Gracefully Written, Witty, Insightful, but Terribly Didactic. By the Light of My Father's Smile." The Globe and Mail Oct 31 1998: 0.ProQuest. Web. 22 Sep. 2014.

Thomas, Ketty. The Lazarus Crisis: Subjectivity, Language and Sacrifice in Cultural Narratives. Order No. 3340132 State University of New York at Stony Brook, 2008 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Thurschwell, Pamela. Sigmund Freud. Kentucky: Routledge, 2000. Print.

Toombs, Charles Phillip. For My People: The Development of Self in Afro-American Fiction—The Example of Alice Walker. Order No. 8709864 Purdue University, 1986 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 4 Oct. 2014.

Toye, Margaret E. "Towards a Poethics of Love PoststructuralistFeminist Ethics and Literary Creation." Feminist Theory 11 (April, 2010): 39-55. Print.

Tucker, Lindsey. "Alice Walker's The Color Purple: Emergent Woman, Emergent Text." Black American Literature Forum 22 (Spring, 1988): 81-95. Print.

Tuttle, Tara. "Biting Temptation": An Examination of the Eden Myth in the Southern Fiction of William Faulkner, Alice Walker, and Toni Morrison. Order No. 3308335 University of Louisville, 2008 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Vartolomei, Adelina. "Possessing The Secret of Joy in Self-Exile." International Journal of Cross-Cultural Studies and Environmental Communication 1.1 (2012): 67-77. Print.

Wagenheim, Lavanda Caldwell. Keats's "Ode on a Grecian Urn" and "Ode to a Nightingale": A Kristevan Reading of the Speaker as "Subject-in-Process". Order No. 1391936 University of South Alabama, 1998 Ann ArborProQuest. Web. 19 May 2015.

Walker, Alice. <http://alicewalkersgarden.com>. 2015. Web. 28 Feb. 2016.

---. "By the Light of My Father's Smile." Ms (Sept., 1998): 47-8. ProQuest. Web. 29 Aug. 2014.

---. By the Light of My Father's Smile. Virginia: Phoenix Paperback, 1998. Print.

---. In Search of Our Mothers' Gardens: Womanist Prose. Massachusetts: Mariner Books. 2003. Print.

---. Possessing the Secret of Joy. London: Vintage, 2009. Print.

---. The Color Purple. Virginia: Phoenix Paperback, 2004. Print.

---. The Third Life of Grange Copeland. London: Phoenix Paperback, 1988. Print.

Walley, Christine. J. "Searching for 'Voices': Feminism, Anthropology, and the Global Debate over Female Genital Operations." Cultural Anthropology 12 (Aug., 1997): 405-438. Print.

Warren, Nagueyalti, and Sally Wolff. "'Like The Pupil of an Eye': Sexual Blinding of Women in Alice Walker's Works." Southern Literary Journal 31.1 (1998): 1. Academic Search Premier. Web. 2 Nov. 2012.

Waters Dawson, and J. Emma. Images of the Afro-American Female Character in Jean Toomer's "Cane," Zora Neale Hurston's "Their Eyes Were Watching God," and Alice Walker's "The Color Purple". Order No. 8728320 University of South Florida, 1987 Ann Arbor ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Wahaltre, Sidra Smith. "Novel Identities: Black Female Self-Authorization in Late Nineteenth- and Early Twentieth-Century African American Fiction". Order No. 3217074 Tufts University, 2006 Ann Arbor ProQuest. 23 Feb. 2016 .

White, Evelyn C. Alice Walker: A Life. New York: W. W. Norton & Company, 2005. Print.

Willis, Gladys J. Alice Walker's Influence on Womanist Theology. Bloomington: Xlibris Corporation, 2006. Print.

Worthington, Pepper. "Writing a Rationale for a Controversial Common Reading Book: Alice Walker's 'The Color Purple.'" English Journal 74.1 (1985): 48-52. ERIC. Web. 4 Feb. 2013.

Xiao-ming, Zhao. "Subversions of Colonialism and Patriarchal Values in By the Light of My Father's Smile." US - China Foreign Language 10.12 (2012): 1861. ProQuest. Web. 11 Oct. 2014.

Zhang, Weihua. Claiming B(l)ack Manhood, Claiming Souls: Male Portraiture in Novels by Alice Walker, Toni Morrison, and Gloria Naylor: A Womanist Reading. Diss. State University of New York at Albany, 1996. Print.

LIST OF PUBLICATIONS

- Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian. "Sylvia Plath, angry Young Woman." The Journal of International Social Research. 6. 24. (2013): 327- 331
- Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian. "Postmodernism in Contemporary Persian Short Stories." Theory and Practice in Language Studies. 3. 1. (2013): 35-40
- Rosli Talif and Kamelia Talebian Sedehi. "Melancholic Celie in The Color Purple." Pertanika Journal of Social Sciences & Humanities. 22.2. (2014): 621- 631
- Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian and Rosli Talif. "The Color Purple and Women's Time." Journal of Language Teaching and Research. 5. 6. (2014): 1328-1333
- Talif, Rosli and Kamelia Talebian Sedehi . "Characters in Process in The Color Purple." Procedia - Social and Behavioral Sciences. 118 (2014): 425-432.
- Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian and Rosli Talif. "Speaking Characters in Possessing the Secret of Joy." 3L: The Southeast Asian Journal of English Language Studies. 20. 2. (2014): 55 –66
- Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian, Rosli Talif , Wan Roselezam Wan Yahya and Hardev Kaur. "Magdalena's Shaping and Reshaping Identity in By the Light of My Father's Smile." Journal of English Language and Literature. 1. 2. (2014): 47- 52
- Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian and Wan Roselezam Wan Yahya. "Journey through Nature and Self: The Melancholic Narrator in Atwood's Surfacing." Pertanika Journal of Social Sciences & Humanities. 23. 1. (2014): 247-252
- Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian and Hardev Kaur. "Aliens' Arrival and the End of the World – an Apocalyptic Reading of Childhood's End." Theory and Practice in Language Studies. 5. 5. (2015): 947-951
- Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian, Rosli Talif , Wan Roselezam Wan Yahya and Hardev Kaur. "Interconnection of Kristevan Semiotic Chora and Nature in By the Light of My Father's Smile." Mediterranean Journal of Social Sciences. 6. 3. (2015): 490- 493

Accepted Papers And To Be Published

- Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian and Omar Mohammed Abdullah. "Semiotic and symbolic Aspects of Language in John Donne's Selected Poems" Mediterranean Journal of Social Sciences. (2015)
- Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian, Rosli Talif , Wan Roselezam Wan Yahya and Hardev Kaur. "'Melancholic Mem in the Third Life of Grange Copeland'." Pertanika Journal of Social Sciences & Humanities. (2015)

List of Conferences

Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian and Rosli Talif. “Characters in Process in The Color Purple.” International conference on Knowledge- Innovatio- Excellence: Synergy in Language Research and Practice. Malaysia, UKM University, 2013

Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian, Rosli Talif , Wan Roselezam Wan Yahya and Hardev Kaur. “Shaping Identity through Language in Alice Walker's Third Life of Grange Copeland.” 8th Malaysia International Conference on Languages, Literatures and Cultures. Malaysia, UPM, 2014

Ming, Alex Lau Zhe, Kamelia Talebian Sedehi, Wan Roselezam Wan Yahya. “A Journey through Nature in Margaret Atwood’s Surfacing.” 8th Malaysia International Conference on Languages, Literatures and Cultures. Malaysia, UPM, 2014

Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian and Omar Mohammed Abdullah. “The Bluest Eye and the Two Poles of Language, Semiotic and Symbolic.” IICON 2014 “Infrastructure Innovation and Transformation for the 21st Century and Beyond. Infrastructure University, Malaysia, 2014

Abdullah, Omar Muhammed and Kamelia Talebian Sedehi and Hardev Kaur. “Ilaha, the Traumatized Female Eunuch in “The Wedding Night.” First International Conference on Educational Studies. Malaysia, UTM,

2015 Participation in the following upcoming conferences

Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian , Omar Mohammed Abdullah and Rosli Talif. “Female Circumcision and its effects on Firdaus and Tashi.” International Conference on Trends in Social Sciences and Humanities. Indonesia, Bali, 2015

Abdullah, Omar Muhammed, Kamelia Talebian Sedehi and Wan Roselezam Wan Yahya. “Forming Subjectivity through Abjection and Lesbianism.” International Conference on Trends in Social Sciences and Humanities. Indonesia, Bali, 2015

Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian, Rosli Talif , Wan Roselezam Wan Yahya and Hardev Kaur. “Melancholic Eunuch Magdalena in By the Light of My Father's Smile.” International Conference on Languages. Malaysia, UNISZA, 2015

Sedehi, Kamelia Talebian , Omar Mohammed Abdullah. “The Translator’s role in the spaces between two languages in the Translator Translated.” International Conference on Languages. Malaysia, UNISZA, 2015

Awards

International Graduate Research Fellowship, November 2014- August 2015

Second place in three minute thesis competition faculty level, 2014.

Second place in three minute thesis competition university level, 2015.

Participation in three minute thesis competition in national level within Malaysia, 2015.

UNIVERSITI PUTRA MALAYSIA

STATUS CONFIRMATION FOR THESIS / PROJECT REPORT AND COPYRIGHT

ACADEMIC SESSION : _____

TITLE OF THESIS / PROJECT REPORT :

SUBJECTIVITIES GAINED AND LOST IN MELANCHOLIC FEMALE EUNUCHS IN ALICE WALKER'S SELECTED NOVELS

NAME OF STUDENT : KAMELIA TALEBIAN SEDEHI

I acknowledge that the copyright and other intellectual property in the thesis/project report belonged to Universiti Putra Malaysia and I agree to allow this thesis/project report to be placed at the library under the following terms:

1. This thesis/project report is the property of Universiti Putra Malaysia.
2. The library of Universiti Putra Malaysia has the right to make copies for educational purposes only.
3. The library of Universiti Putra Malaysia is allowed to make copies of this thesis for academic exchange.

I declare that this thesis is classified as :

*Please tick (v)

☐

CONFIDENTIAL

(Contain confidential information under Official Secret Act 1972).

☐

RESTRICTED

(Contains restricted information as specified by the organization/institution where research was done).

☐

OPEN ACCESS

I agree that my thesis/project report to be published as hard copy or online open access.

This thesis is submitted for :

☐

PATENT

Embargo from _____ until _____ (date) (date)

Approved by:

(Signature of Student)
New IC No/ Passport No.:

Date :

(Signature of Chairman of Supervisory Committee)
Name:

Date :

[Note : If the thesis is CONFIDENTIAL or RESTRICTED, please attach with the letter from the organization/institution with period and reasons for confidentially or restricted.]